Data on Draftees From Each State Being Compiled

Figures to be Used When Conscripts are Summoned to Colors

Washington —(AP)— Estimates of the number of military trainees to be supplied by each state on the first draft call were being completed today by selective service officials.

The figures, to be announced soon, will be used when the first call to arms under the conscription program is sounded, probably in mid-November. Subdivided within the states, they will decide the number of draftees to be furnished by each of the 6,500 conscription areas in the country.

Officials reported that the estimates were based on the number of men expected to be eligible for service in each state, with a credit to each for its share of the 1,105,471 regulars and reserves of the present army, navy and marine corps.

In this connection, enlistment figures were made public showing that New York, the most populous state, has an estimated 77,351 men now serving in the nation's fighting forces, with Pennsylvania second at 68,299 and California, third, at 66,666.

Top Ranking States

Added to these to make up the 10 states ranking highest in men in service were Texas 64,430, Illinois 48,484, Ohio 37,030, Massachusetts 36,858, North Carolina 29,121, Georgia 28,616 and Kentucky 26,379.

An eight-page questionnaire designed to produce exact information on eligibility was made public by selective service officials last night. Having it filled out will be the third big step in draft procedure —the first being registration Oct. 16, and the second being the draft lottery to be held here, probably some day in the week of Oct. 21.

The lottery will determine the order in which registered men become subject to call. The questionnaire, sent out as each call is issued, will provide officials with the information on which to order some men to active service and defer others.

Sixty Questions

Subjects covered by the questions range from name and address to physical, mental and moral fitness for military service and such matters as conscientious objection. There are 60 questions, some having more than one part, but not all will

Dykstra to Take Post As Draft Administrator

Granted Indefinite Leave of Absence As University Head

Madison—(AP)— President Clarence A. Dykstra, of the University of Wisconsin, said today he would accept the post of federal draft administrator which was offered him by President Roosevelt recently.

Dykstra, who discussed the matter with the president and the Secretary of War Stimson earlier this week, announced his decision following a meeting with the university board of regents which granted him an indefinite leave of absence.

While willing to serve the federal government, Dykstra was understood to have been desirous of retaining his relationship with the university of which he has been president since May 1, 1937. The leave granted by the regents solved the problem.

"Loaned" To U. S.

The regents, who met informally in Dykstra's office, said they were "loaning" the university president to the federal government as long as he is needed. A formal meeting of the regents will be held Oct. 26 to ratify the action.

Dykstra said he would send a telegram to Stimson notifying him of his acceptance, adding that he would assume his new duties as soon as his appointment is confirmed by the senate.

Dykstra, who is 57 years old, has held numerous administrative and educational posts.

Before becoming city manager of Cincinnati in 1930 he was commissioner of the Los Angeles water and power department from 1923 to 1926, and its personnel director from 1926 to 1930. He also served as executive secretary of the Cleveland Civic league, the Chicago City club, and the Los Angeles City club.

From 1909 to 1918 he was professor of political science and head of the department at the University of Kansas. He also taught political science and similar other courses at the University of California, Ohio State university, and the University of Chicago.

He has served as a member of the public works administration, the national resources committee, and the Ohio advisory committee of the United States employment service.

Johnson Found Guilty of U. S. Tax Evasion

Five of Eight Other Defendants Convicted Of Giving Him Help

Chicago—(AP)—William R. Johnson, pictured by federal prosecutors as the overlord of Chicago's organized gambling, was convicted today on charges of evading income taxes.

Five of eight co-defendants were convicted on charges of aiding Johnson in his efforts to defraud the government of $1,867,864 in taxes on a 1936-1939 income of $3,377,615.

The jury deliberated the case 12 hours. Johnson was convicted on all five counts lodged against him, as were Jack Sommers, James A. Hartigan, John M. Flanagan and William P. Kelly.

Conviction on five counts makes them liable to a maximum prison term of 22 years and a $10,000 fine. Stuart Brown, another defendant, was convicted on two counts, while Edward Wait, Andrew J. Creighton and Reginald Mackay were acquitted.

The eight co-defendants of Johnson were accused of being fronts for him in the operation of gambling resorts. Prosecutors charged they endeavored to cover up Johnson's sources of income.

German Planes Raid London in Daylight Attacks

Number of Persons Buried in Wreckage Of Liverpool Hotel

London—(AP)—Nazi warplanes soaring beyond sight in the autumnal mists made five daylight raids today on London after a night of scattered attacks in which an undetermined number of persons were buried in the wreckage of a Liverpool hotel.

Some houses and business establishments in London were smashed today, but the ministries of air and home security said casualties and damage were comparatively light. Bombs also were dropped in Kent and Sussex.

At least four German planes were destroyed, a communique said, and one British fighter was lost, with the pilot safe.

Five houses were wrecked during the first raid. Stores and offices were damaged during the second and a number of casualties were reported.

The press association reported that a hospital and a convent were damaged in the night raids. Eleven nuns in the convent escaped without injury, after fighting flames with hand extinguishers on the roof until the fire got out of control and they had to come down.

Bomb Nazi Bases

Unofficial reports said 40 nazi planes tried to reach London in the first raid, and 60 in the second, while 80 took part in the next two raids.

Flying through dense fog and rain, R.A.F. pilots reported bombing German naval stations at Wilshelmshaven and Kiel and the port of Hamburg last night in Germany and heavy attacks on invasion bases.

An "enormous white explosion" followed by fires resulted from release of bombs at Wilhelmshaven, the pilots said. Similar explosions occurred at Kiel and Hamburg, where the Deutsche Petroleum works was attacked.

Another raid was made on De Kooi, the Netherlands, near the Den Helder naval base.

Nazi Torpedo Boats in Fight Off Isle of Wight

Berlin—(AP)—Bombs of heavy caliber were reported on military objectives near the famous London bridge in today's air attacks, informed sources said tonight.

Whether the ancient structure was damaged was not known.

Another squadron of German planes approached Hastings, on the south coast, and from a great height swooped in steep dives which resulted in damage to railways, gas works and large blocks of buildings and harbor facilities, a spokesman said.

A railway center on the Thames estuary also came in for an attack, this source said.

Eleven British planes were shot down, fliers' accounts said, compared with two German planes still missing.

Berlin—(AP)— A German torpedo boat flotilla was reported today to have sallied out of a continental port and fought a sea engagement off the Isle of Wight with British light naval forces.

The result of the engagement was not known immediately. The Isle of Wight is off Southampton on the southeast coast of England.

Informed sources said the German flotilla had encountered British submarines, destroyers and torpedo boats.

The high command reported that one convoy off Dover was broken up by German "long-distance artillery of the navy and army" and two others were attacked by dive bombers off Scotland and near the Hebrides. Three ships were halted by bomb hits, the high command said.

D.N.B., the official German news agency, said today it had learned from the best informed German sources that the exact British air losses from July to the present day comprised 3,950 planes, of which 2,900 were fighters and the remainder light and heavy bombers.

During the day yesterday German planes were reported to have unloaded 12,000 kilograms (26,520 pounds) of bombs on England, and during the night 202,000 (446,420 pounds) kilograms more.

Submarines were described as especially active. One U-boat reported sinking 21,000 tons of shipping.

New waves of German war planes meanwhile, were reported carrying the two-months-old air siege of London, and D.N.B. quoted returning fliers as saying great clouds of smoke floated over the city after bombs were dropped this morning.

"Numerous bombs of medium and heavy caliber caused great fires between Thames bend and Leyton," the agency said. "Furthermore numerous hits could be observed in the neighborhood of battersea park on the south bank of the Thames (where London's greatest power station is situated.)

Seven British fighters were shot down in air fights over south England, D.N.B. reported, after German

Eyes Moscow For Hint on Next Move

Ankara, Turkey —(AP)— Non-belligerent Turkey, while taking every precaution to meet a gathering crisis in the Balkans, appeared today to be keeping close watch for crystalization of soviet Russia's attitude toward the advent of German troops and planes in Rumania.

It was learned that Premier Refik Saydam had received the new soviet ambassador, Sergei Vinogradoff, yesterday several hours before the Turkish radio broadcast a warning that 2,000,000 Turkish troops were ready to meet any attempted German thrust at Egypt by way of the Near East.

The subject of the conference between the two statesmen was not disclosed. Neutral observers, however, speculated on the significance of a statement in the subsequent broadcast that "it seems the Balkans and even soviet Russia are on the brink of unexpected war."

Bucharest—(AP)—Large open trucks bearing German flags and packed with German soldiers carrying bayonetted rifles passed through Bucharest streets at noon today.

Crowds on the sidewalks stood at attention as the trucks passed, many persons taking off their hats.

The procession was headed by small cars bearing German officers and standards. Simultaneously squadrons of airplanes droned again over the capital and oil fields.

Swastika flags were unfurled at a number of hotels.

As German officers promenaded the streets and held conferences, British officials said military and naval attaches with their staffs, as well as commercial staffs and many clerks are leaving immediately under London orders for nationals to depart. The first secretary of the embassy was expected to remain another week.

Number Not Estimated

German circles claimed that by establishing an air patrol over the vital oil fields and by moving troops into Rumania the reich once again had taken the initiative from Britain.

There was no estimate of the number of German soldiers which entered the city.

Today's procession of troops, following yesterday's airshow over Bucharest, brought the first actual evidence that German troops now are in Rumania for claimed "instruction" purposes.

German military penetration of Rumania now is expected to reveal itself fully.

The nazi troops which rolled through the capital today were believed to have arrived by way of the Danube.

It was believed other German detachments were taking up positions in the Rumanian oil field.

Girl, Shot by Former Beau, Is Recovering

Appleton Man Used Borrowed Gun in Attempt on Her Life

The condition of Miss Gertrude Sprister, 32, route 3, Appleton, who was wounded Thursday night by a rejected suitor who then shot himself to death, was reported much improved today at St. Elizabeth hospital.

The girl was shot three times by Wynn Bohnsack, 46, Appleton, at the girl's home southeast of Appleton before he took his own life. One bullet grazed her head, another broke her arm and another entered her chest. The chest wound was superficial, the attending physician said today.

Bohnsack had been keeping company with the girl, but they broke up a month ago. In a note found on his person, he stated he could not live without the girl and blamed her family for the broken romance.

Sheriff John Lappen said today that Bohnsack got the pistol he used from a local sports shop several weeks ago. He said he wanted it for use in an amateur play, Lappen said he was told.

Slayer Seized In Minnesota

Man Who Escaped From Texas Asylum Is Under Arrest

Minneapolis—(AP)—A collector for a weekly magazine who had been living quietly here for a year as a respected citizen, was arrested yesterday as an escaped inmate from an Austin, Texas, insane asylum.

Police Detective Captain Clarence McLaskey arrested the man on a downtown street and said he was Howard Merit Pierson, 26, who was committed to the asylum after the slaying of his parents, Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. William Pierson in Austin on April 25, 1935. Pierson escaped from the asylum April 16, 1938.

Captain McLaskey said he recognized Pierson, a few blocks from police headquarters, from a picture he had seen on a bulletin last Tuesday, when he made a periodical check of fugitive files.

Mild-mannered and well-dressed, Pierson made no attempt to escape as his wrists were manacled. Pierson denied his identity until McLaskey pulled a circular containing Pierson's picture, from his pocket. The fugitive said "that's me, you finally caught me."

The detective captain said Pierson had been living in a loop rooming house under the name of "Nathan Horton", and had been collecting for the magazine in this erritory for approximately a year.

Previous to coming to Minneapolis Pierson had been collecting for the magazine in Wisconsin.

Judge Sage's Body Is Found in River

Detroit —(AP)— Two duck hunters found the body of common pleas judge Robert E. Sage, sought for murder in connection with the fatal shooting of two business associates in his chambers in the county building, on an island in the Detroit river today.

Judge Sage had drowned and the body had washed ashore.

Identification was made through a key found in Sage's pocket and through a tailor's label in the suit worn by the drowned man. The key was to the hotel room of a friend of Sage from which the gun used in the double killing was taken.

Judge Sage had been sought since Oct. 1 on a murder warrant in connection with the deaths of Ralph and Alfred Nadell. Police learned that he obtained the gun allegedly used in the shooting from a friend's room, approximately four hours before the tragedy.

Chief of Detectives Paul A. Wencel said today he believed that Judge Sage arranged the meeting Oct. 1 with his three associates with the idea of "doing some shooting."

Maurice D. Smilay, an attorney, was wounded during the shooting.

Supreme Court Starts Review of Challenge To State Code Laws

Madison—(AP)—Review of a suit challenging the constitutionality of code laws regulating wages, hours and standards of barbers, cleaners and dyers, shoe rebuilders, and beauticians was undertaken by the supreme court yesterday.

The litigation came before the court on the appeal of the trades practice division of the department of agriculture from a decision of Circuit Judge Gustave G. Gehrz, Milwaukee, invalidating the law and dismissing the division's suit accusing Edgar Neveau, Milwaukee barber, of cutting code prices on hair cuts and other services.

Code Counsel Fred M. Wylie asserted the codes were constitutional because they "they served the public interest," but Benjamin P. Galin, attorney for Neveau, contended they "completely ignored the public."

Seizes $1,400 in South Wayne Raid

Monroe, Wis. —(AP)—Approximately $1,400 was obtained by a lone robber who held up the Bank of South Wayne yesterday and escaped in an automobile, bank officials estimated today.

The robber, wearing gloves, covered the president, Frank Tree, and Mrs. Ethel Olson, assistant cashier, with a revolver as he scooped up the currency. Then he locked them in a vault and escaped in a green sedan.

The man was described as about 25 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighing about 150-160. He was of dark complexion and wore a dark suit and hat.

Mrs. Clifford Stixrood saw the robber run from the bank. She called a filling station on the way to Monroe just as the car roared past it. Roads in the vicinity were blocked but no trace was found of the man.

Two Women Killed in Crash Near Kenosha

Kenosha —(AP)— Two Chicagoans were killed and another injured seriously yesterday when their automobile crashed into a loaded gravel truck at the intersection of Highways 41 and 43, 11 miles northwest of Kenosha.

Mrs. Koch's husband, Henry Koch, 28, the driver, was hurt seriously.

Travelers Say Nazis Busy 'Germanizing' Alsace Lorraine

Les Verrieres, Franco-Swiss Frontier—(AP)—Travelers reaching here from Alsace Lorraine reported today the nazis are "Germanizing" that region by rooting up thousands of French families and replacing them with Germans from as far away as the Baltic states.

The dispossessed Frenchmen, most of them middle class lawyers, physicians and merchants, are being dumped into the lap of the Vichy government, these sources said.

Between 12,000 and 15,000 Frenchmen from Metz, Thionville and other Alsace Lorraine cities have been expelled to unoccupied France, the travelers estimated. They said that for every Frenchman expelled a German of corresponding profession is sent into the region.

A Frenchman lawyer said German police awakened him at 7:30 one morning and ordered him to be ready to leave with his family within three hours.

A lawyer who protested an order to move said Frenchmen had Adolf Hitler's assurance that Aryans could remain.

He said the police replied: "Only Germans are wanted here."

Tokio Agency Lashes at U. S.

Says Tanks, Trucks And Guns Stored at Manila, Singapore

New York—(AP)—Domei, Japanese news agency, declared in a broadcast today from Tokio that the United States armament industry is storing large quantities of tanks, trucks, anti-aircraft artillery, guns, bombing planes and other munitions at Manila and Singapore in readiness for transportation to China as soon as Britain opens the Burma road.

The Chinese government representative at Manila, in the Philippines, has been permitted to open an ammunition factory there, the agency stated.

It quoted the Tokio press as emphasizing a wish for improvement of relations between Japan and soviet Russia.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi said "coming negotiations between the two countries which are aiming at finding a satisfactory solution of good neighborly relations may be looked forward to with confidence."

Chicago — (AP) — A circuit court jury awarded Mrs. Bernice Peacock, 34, a judgment of $1,000.15—15 cents more than she asked for in her suit against a chain grocery store.

She complained that a clerk accused her of stealing three tomatoes which she had purchased at another store. In the ensuing tussle the tomatoes were squashed. She sued for $1,000, the charges including false arrest, false imprisonment and slander.

The jury awarded $1,000 for embarrassment suffered and 15 cents for the loss of the tomatoes.

Man Slain in Attempt to Burglarize Post Office

Menomonie, Wis. —(AP)— An unidentified man was shot to death today while attempting a Burglary at the post office in the village of Downing, 20 miles northwest of here.

Postmaster Kenneth Whistler, who has been sleeping in the post office each night since a previous burglary, opened fire with a shotgun as the man and a companion entered the building.

One man screamed and both fled. The body of one was found several hours later in tall grass bordering an alley a block and a half from the post office. He had been wounded in the abdomen and shoulder.

The second man apparently fled in an automobile which had been parked in the alley.

Whistler, who operates a restaurant and general store in the building housing the post office, said that he awakened at 1:50 a. m. and saw two men forcing their way into his establishment. The pair entered, went back outside, and then returned. It was then that Whistler opened fire with a single barrel shotgun.

Whistler, fearing that the men might be waiting for him outside, did not venture from the post office for half an hour. He then informed fellow townsmen of the shooting and notified Sheriff John H. Harmon.

The neighborhood was searched, but the dead man's body was not found until 7 o'clock.

Harmon, who called post office inspectors into the case, said that the dead man wore a hat and tie bearing labels of a Minneapolis store. He was between 50 and 55 years of age, 5 feet, 11 inches tall, weighed about 180 pounds and had grey hair.

The Downing post office has been robbed four times in recent years, the last time about a year ago.

Young American Ousted by Mexico

Mexico City —(AP)— Relatives of Marlowe Merrick, young American business man who was reported to have been taken into custody and rushed toward the Texas border, said today they heard he arrived late last night at Laredo, Texas. They had no further details.

Friends said two men identifying themselves as secret agents arrested Merrick, a former resident of Los Angeles, Calif., who was engaged in the highway construction business.

He was said to have telephoned his wife later from an unidentified point to inform her that he was being deported under Mexico's "Article 33," which empowers the president to deport any alien he regards as undesirable.

Mrs. Merrick, a Mexican citizen born of Canadian parents, sought information from police and notified the United States embassy. No official comment was given.

Bevin Pleads for More Production

London—(AP)—Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, broadcast an appeal to workers and management today for "the most tremendous and supreme effort of production that has ever been made."

Anyone trying "to rake up old sores and perpetuate old prejudices" between management and labor, he declared, "is a friend of Hitler and an enemy of liberty and democracy."

Two Liners to be Sent to Far East

Washington—(AP)— Secretary Hull said today that the liners Washington and Manhattan would be sent to the Far East to evacuate Americans as soon as the vessels could be placed in commission.

The secretary of state added at his press conference that there were now five American passenger vessels in Far Eastern waters, as well as some freighters. Efforts were being made, he said, to locate other ships in the Far East which could be used to evacuate citizens from Japan, China and other Oriental countries.

In answer to a question, Hull said he had no information concerning reports from Shanghai that Japanese military forces were planning to occupy the International Settlement and French concession there after Great Britain reopened the Burma road.

Norwegian Freighter Sunk, British Report

Bishop Says 'War Coming at Us and We Have No Choice'

Kansas City —(AP)— The house of deputies of the Protestant Episcopal church approved today a proposal that the church affiliate with the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. The proposal now goes to the house of bishops, which likewise must give approval by a majority vote before it becomes effective.

Kansas City —(AP)— The Rt. Rev. Frederick W. Beekman, Episcopal bishop of Paris, said today "it no longer is a question of the United States becoming involved in war."

"The war is coming at us so fast we haven't any choice in the matter. The axis powers will have us in it, whether we like it or not," he asserted in an interview.

Bishop Beekman, who fled from the former French capital as nazi "blitz" forces moved in, came here to attend the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal church. His concern, he said, is not fear of actual axis invasion of America, but the defeat of Great Britain would bring economic disaster to the United States.

"It isn't a question of England needing us. We need England. If England should fall to Hitler, America would see the most terrible panic in its history. There wouldn't be a market for new motor cars at $50 each."

Urging that American troops not be sent to aid Britain, he continued:

"They've got all the manpower they need. What they need is more of every mechanical device possible. Britain needs 10 times the number of airplanes, destroyers, tanks, munitions and arms we are supplying them now.

"There is no sense in keeping everything here for our own army. We must keep Britain fighting. She is our first line of defense."

West Allis Appeals To Supreme Court in Water Service Case

Madison—(AP)—The state supreme court today took under advisement the appeal of the city of West Allis to set aside a decision of Circuit Judge Gustave G. Gehrz holding it liable for payment of a balance of $546,124.15 allegedly due for water service furnished by the city of Milwaukee.

Laurence Gram, city attorney of West Allis, told the court that Milwaukee could not collect the balance because it filed a schedule of rates with the public service commission in 1935 instead of 1930, and because it charged Milwaukee county institutions lower rates than the city of West Allis.

Counsel for the city of Milwaukee contended that the city was prevented from filing the rate schedule because of an injunction obtained by West Allis, and that lower rates were charged the institutions because they were charitable organizations.

Recover Body of Boy Drowned by Older Youth in Michigan

Kalamazoo, Mich.—(AP)—Searchers found the body today of 3-year-old Ronald Hibbard on the Kalamazoo river bank two miles from where a 12-year-old playmate confessed he struck and tossed the child into the water.

Sheriff Charles Struble said the older youth, Richard Terrell, admitted three days ago hitting the boy with a stick because he would not put his clothes back on after they went wading in the river. Then, Sheriff Struble declared that Terrell told him, he took fright at the sight of blood on the boy and threw him into the river.

The body was found by a deputy sheriff and a trusty downstream from where the boys had been playing.

Terrell is being held for further questioning.

Willkie Scores New Deal Group As 'Defeatist'

Charges Trip to Ohio Is Political but Public Is Paying for Train

BY THEODORE F. KOOP

Enroute with Willkie to Albany, N. Y.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie criticized the Roosevelt administration today as "defeatist" and argued that such a government "can never win any battle against unemployment or against any foreign foe."

Winding up his 4-day campaign into New England, the Republican presidential nominee declared that New Dealers believe "the era of expansion is over."

"The government that does not believe that its people can be employed will never see to it that they are employed," he said in a prepared speech for a Lawrence, Mass., audience.

"A government that preaches defeat can never win any battle against unemployment or against any foreign foe."

Willkie moved eastward through Massachusetts today after calling the New Deal an "irresponsible government!"

"Reckless Acts"

He asserted last night in Boston that President Roosevelt "says that Hitler and Mussolini would like to see him defeated this November. He does not say this directly . . . He insinuates it. He leaves the real job to his hand-picked candidate for vice president and his hand-picked governor of New York."

"Dragging the European war into our domestic elections is not a responsible act—it is a reckless one."

In his prepared speech, Willkie then asked whether his audience cared "What Hitler thinks or what Mussolini thinks."

As he read it he eliminated the words Hitler and Mussolini and substituted "foreign governments."

Crowd of 35,000

Willkie addressed an audience in the Boston National league baseball park, estimated by police at 32,000 to 35,000, after he ended a 100-mile automobile campaign through southeastern Massachusetts cities.

Late in the afternoon he had stopped at Harvard square in Cambridge and told a crowd of students that the special train carrying President Roosevelt into Pennsylvania and Ohio was being financed partly by the public.

"Willkie asserted that "this is no military inspection trip," because, he said, "the president took aboard in Pennsylvania the Democratic candidate for senator and other Democratic officials."

In a later speech at Lynn, Mass. Willkie contended that operation of the train was "a contravention of the Hatch act and the corrupt practices act."

Hits "Punitive" Laws

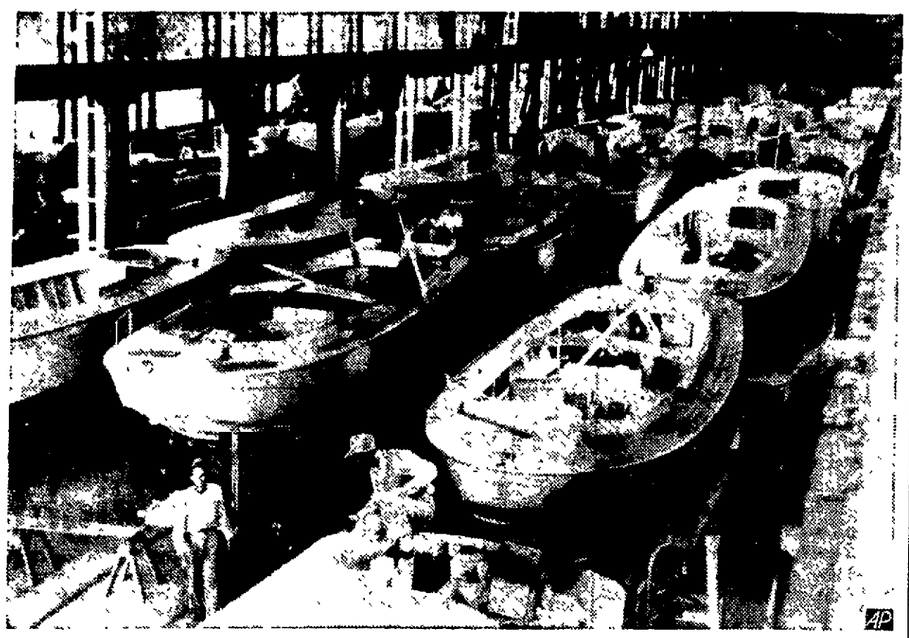
Willkie today called a smokeless factory in Lowell, Mass., a symbol of the New Deal and declared that "punitive, restrictive laws" had made it impossible for the United States to recover quickly from the depression.

Hatless and tanned from a month's campaigning, the Republican presidential nominee stood in the center of Lowell commons to close the automobile portion of a swift-moving, two-day swing through industrial Massachusetts.

Under a bright autumn sun, Willkie spoke earlier before thousands in two other big Massachusetts manufacturing communities — the boot and shoe city of Haverill and Lawrence, a textile center—before boarding his special train for Worcester and the western part of the state.

Government, he said in Lowell, "should see that there is no dirty play" in the country's economic life, but added that there should be fixed rules "which can't be changed in the middle of the game."

"And we want rules which will provide that once in a while, if the players work hard enough, they can make a goal," Willkie continued. The crowd cheered and applauded.



UNITED STATES BUILDS A FLAT-BOTTOM FLEET—A boat building plant in New Orleans is busy on scores of small craft ordered by the United States Navy. They are sturdy, flat-bottomed vessels designed for reconnaissance and landing troops or for evacuations such as the British found necessary at Dunkerque, in the retreat from Flanders. Here are some of the boats which workmen are hurrying to completion. The plant is expanding to take care of government work which includes orders for numerous light-armored torpedo boats recently tested by the navy.

Roosevelt Asks More Speed on Defense Tour

President Will Talk About Preparedness Tonight Over Radio

Aboard Roosevelt Train Enroute to Dayton, Ohio—(AP)—President Roosevelt pushed deep into Ohio today to spruce up his knowledge of "how this great defense program of ours is going," as a prelude to a radio address to all the western hemisphere on preparedness.

He was to speak tonight at Dayton at 9 p. m. (8 p. m. C S T.) over all domestic networks and by short wave to Latin America.

In a grave period of war and world chaos he selected Columbus day to amplify, aides said, the theme of "all for one and one for all" in inter-American relations and to report on what his own country is doing to make itself invulnerable.

The immediate background of the address was a tour of defense facilities in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Concluding the first phase of a two-day trip into the neighbor states last night at Akron, Ohio, the president bespoke confidence that "we shall be able to avoid being brought into war through attack by somebody else on the Americas." He added, however, to thousands of persons backed around his train at the station, 'but I also believe, and I think most of you do too, that the best way to avoid an attack is to be ready to meet one."

That was why, Mr. Roosevelt said, he had told foremen and workers in steel plants turning out defense orders at Pittsburgh, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio, "that the one thing we all ought to work for in speeding up this program is more speed."

The chief executive concentrated his attention yesterday on major steel mills in Pittsburgh and Youngstown. In Pittsburgh, he dedicated another USHA project embracing the agency's 100,000th dwelling unit.

Essentially, he said, it was "a trip to educate myself, to learn about what is happening for national defense in this country."

But banners proclaiming his third-term candidacy, tremendous crowds which split the air with greetings everywhere he went, and state and local politicians who trooped onto his special train and into his private car, gave something of a campaign flavor to the trip, regardless of how non-political Mr. Roosevelt said he wanted to keep it.

War Situation Today

Turkey Looks to Moscow as Germans Occupy Bucharest

Truckloads of steel-helmeted nazi infantrymen rumbled through the streets of Bucharest today as German military penetration of Rumania expanded, and anxious Turkey, ready for war, looked towards Moscow for soviet reaction to Germany's drive to the east.

In western Europe, the battle of Britain went on in the air and on the sea. Nazi warplanes roared across the channel against London and a German torpedo boat flotilla was reported to have fought an engagement off the Isle of Wight with British submarines, torpedo boats and destroyers.

The presence of the German troops in Bucharest gave the impression of nazi occupation of the capital. Planes roared overhead, and the swastika was unfurled at many hotels.

The official Turkish radio declared last night that "the Balkans and even soviet Russia are on the brink of unexpected war."

At the same time German sources in Bucharest said the establishment of an axis air patrol over Rumania's closely-guarded oil fields once again had seized the initiative from the British, and predicted a prompt break in relations between Rumania and Britain.

The implication was that the axis acted because of a belief Britain had designs on rich oil supplies now under the wing of the German air force.

Nazi airmen attacking London reported today that huge fires were raging in the city, but British dispatches said the German attacks lacked the intensity of previous assaults although 36 areas of the capital were bombed.

London's overnight all-clear signal sounded about 2:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m., C. S. T.), much earlier than usual.

Bombs falling near the country home of American Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy outside London smashed a number of cottages. The ambassador was uninjured.

R. A. F. planes struck through fog into Germany and at nazi bases on the French side of the English channel, coordinating their attack with British long-range guns which engaged in a duel for more than three hours last night and today with German batteries. Flashes from the opposing guns rippled along the Dover and Calais area in the longest cross-channel bombardment of the war.

Britons continued to leave Rumania for Turkey and Greece as those countries anxiously watched the movement of German troops into Rumania.

The Turkish official radio discounted Germany's explanation that her troops were to guard Rumanian oil fields and frontiers as "insufficient reason," and warned that 2,000,000 Turkish troops stood between the nazi troops and Britain's near-eastern defenses—if that is the axis goal.

Greece closely watched her Albanian border where thousands of fascist troops have been concentrated.

With the departure of the last British national from Rumania, severance of British-Rumanian diplomatic relations was expected.

The pro-nazi Rumanian government began selecting Iron Guard members to take complete control of the American-owned Rumanian Telephone company in a program to place all foreign-owned companies in the hands of Iron Guard directorates.

Americans in Japan, advised to leave the Orient, advertised household possessions for sale and made shipping arrangements.

Lutheran Unity Hangs on Word

'Errorless', With Reference to Bible, Subject of Debate

Omaha, Neb. —(AP)— Delegates to the 12th biennial convention of the United Lutheran church of America hoped for a statement today from its titular head, the Rev. F. H. Knubel, on a matter of a single word in scriptural doctrine that may affect the unity of 2,000,000 Lutherans in this country and Canada.

The doctrinal subject is one of three points which must be approved by the U.L.C.A. here and the American Lutheran church at Detroit before a cooperative federation between the two branches of Lutheran faith can be established.

Debate was to be resumed over the meaning of the word "errorless" in a statement regarding "God's Word, the Bible." The statement asserted the separate books that make up the scriptures are "related to one another, and taken together, constitute a complete, errorless, unbreakable whole of which Christ is the center. . . ."

Dr. H. Grady Davis of the Chicago Lutheran seminary said the word "errorless" was misleading and confusing. Dr. H. H. Bagger, Pittsburgh, secretary of the U.L.C.A. commission that helped draw up the statements, urged adoption.

The other two points which must be approved deal with exchange of pulpit courtesies with clergymen of other communions and memberships and membership in social organizations apart from the church.

Ask Willkie to Give Short Talk at Neenah

Stevens Point —(AP)— The Republican state executive committee yesterday requested Wendell L. Willkie to speak briefly at Wausau, Green Bay, Neenah, and Fond du Lac, on the Republican presidential nominee's trip through Wisconsin Oct. 21.

Two addresses already have been announced—at LaCrosse Oct. 19 on his way to the twin cities and at Milwaukee, Oct. 21.

Ralph Puchner, of Edgar, was inducted as seventh district executive committeeman to succeed James H. Van Wagenen, who resigned to serve with the national guard, in which he holds a captaincy.

Limit Size of Nets For Smelt Fishing

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison— In order to give the many thousands of its fans elbow room smelt fishing next spring in the Green Bay area will be circumscribed with a new regulation.

Only dip nets not larger than eight feet and with a 1½ inch mesh will be allowed during the season from March 1 to April 25, according to the state conservation commission.

Fishing will again be allowed on all the streams and rivers flowing into Lake Michigan and Green Bay, from their mouths to a point five miles inland, and there will be no bag limits.

Insists That Wallace Endorse All Candidates

Milwaukee—(AP)—Francis T. Murphy, Democratic nominee for congress in the fifth district, said yesterday that state Democrats would boycott the national administration unless Henry A. Wallace indorses all state Democratic candidates at Madison Oct. 22.

Murphy said he spoke for other Democratic nominees as well as for himself.

In a telegram to Charles E. Broughton, of Sheboygan, Democratic national committeeman, Murphy said:

"Support of the national administration by the Wisconsin Democrats is entirely dependent upon the unqualified indorsement of all candidates the Democrats have chosen as their nominees.

"If assurance of such indorsement is not forthcoming, I will not only boycott such talk of Wallace, but will lead an organized public protest."

Children's Home Directors Plan Budget, Funds Campaign

The board of directors of the Children's Country Home at Winneconne outlined the school's budget and planned the annual drive for funds at a meeting Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Pickard, Neenah.

Mrs. A. F. Schroder of Winneconne presided. Marvin Dubbe, superintendent of the home, talked on various phases of its operation.

Mrs. William E. Buchanan of Appleton was named to head the drive for funds in Appleton.

It was reported at the meeting that during 1940 the agency gave full care to an average of 37 children daily and partial services to an additional nine youths who are not at the home. The agency is serving 47 at present and expects an increase during this year.

Of the 47 children at the home, 22 are from Winnebago county (13 from Oshkosh and nine from Neenah-Menasha), nine from Washington county, four from Fond du Lac county, and three from Outagamie. The balance are from communities throughout the state.

At the conclusion of yesterday's meeting, husbands and wives of board members joined the group for a buffet supper in the Pickard home.

Claim Invasion Of State Rights

Supreme Court Hears Debate on Regulation Of Power Projects

Washington —(AP)— The attorneys general of 39 states contended today before the supreme court that the federal government, in seeking to regulate power projects on non-navigable streams, was attempting "fundamental and far-reaching invasion of the powers reserved to the states" by the constitution.

They argued that the government was attempting "to accomplish through the courts what should be accomplished only by amendment of the federal constitution."

The brief specifically challenged the right of the federal power commission to regulate the Appalachian Electric Power company's hydro-electric project on New river near Radford, Va. Arguments will be heard by the court Monday on the controversy.

The attorneys general asserted that if the federal government were permitted to proceed, "similar encroachments upon the powers of the states with respect to other internal resources of the states may be expected to follow."

They argue that such action would deprive the states of "large tax revenues."

The brief said the position of the federal government in the case was "in complete and irreconcilable conflict with the constitutional powers and proprietary rights of the states in relation to the development of their own natural resources and particularly in relation to the development of their water-power resources."

Continue Efforts to Lift Producer Prices

Albany, N. Y.—(AP)—Federal state officials seeking to determine whether current marketing orders should be amended to raise producers' prices will renew their efforts Tuesday in New York city.

Yesterday, Walter Freeman, secretary of the Indiana Milk and Cream association, and M. G. Van Buskirk, representing 140,000 midwestern cream producers, urged a loosening of New York market restrictions to benefit dairymen from their areas.

Freeman, claiming to represent 172,000 producers from Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri and Illinois, recommended higher cream prices be paid New York producers.

He asserted the unfavorable price range had brought a "material" decrease in western cream shipments here, and said New York milkshed prices for cream are below the national market value.

Axis Still Is In Need of Oil

Invasion of Rumania Won't Help Much, Gas Journal Editor Says

Tulsa, Okla. —(AP)— The new German-Italian-Japanese military axis "is a combination of weakness rather than strength" so far as oil resources are concerned, Editor C. O. Wilson of the Oil and Gas Journal believes.

Wilson told tax department heads of Kansas and Oklahoma oil companies that petroleum production within the three countries was insignificant in relation to their requirements.

"And the successful acquisition of large additional supplies through military conquests is improbable."

"The invasion of Rumania will not solve the petroleum problem of Germany and Italy. Rumania's crude oil production is 125,000 barrels daily, of which 50,000 barrels daily is needed for domestic consumption.

"Japan needs at least 110,000 barrels daily of petroleum and its own production, including substitutes, is less than 10 per cent of that requirement. Normally she supplies her daily deficit through purchases in California and the far east."

Red Cross Doctor Tells How To Avoid the Common Cold

This is the time of the year for the annual onslaught of colds and although the common cold is not a deadly sickness in itself, it may open the door for pneumonia or a half dozen other potentially fatal respiratory ills, the American Red Cross warns.

Medical men who have taken the common cold into the laboratory confess they know little about it. Because it defies the analyst, practically no headway has been made in establishing a specific preventative of treatment. This makes the prevention of colds vitally important to the millions of Americans who suffer each year.

Dr. William DeKleine, national medical director of the American Red Cross, points out that persons with good dietary habits, getting plenty of sleep — in short, generally healthy—seem to be less susceptible. If they do fall victim, recovery is much more rapid and chances of a more serious respiratory illness more remote.

Clothing also has a lot to do with colds, according to Dr. DeKleine. Woolen underwear or heavy clothing should not be worn by persons who spend most of their day in evenly-heated buildings. During the fall the body should be given a chance to harden itself by degrees for more rigorous weather. The weight of clothing worn indoors should be selected on a 70-degree basis, rather than the 20 or 30 degrees prevailing outdoors. Dress to suit the weather when going outside. Get plenty of sleep; drink lots of water; eat moderately, well-balanced meals. Above all, remember that most types of colds are contagious.

Hitler Wins 1st Round Mediterranean Scrap

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(AP)—With Hitler's military occupation of strategically placed Rumania, we can say that the great axis offensive in the battle of the Mediterranean is under way, and that the nazi fuehrer has scored a vastly important success.

Mackenzie

He has by a series of crafty political schemes and threats—and without firing a shot—secured a vital military, air and naval base for further operations in the bloody struggle which is beginning.

But what is of even greater moment is the fact that he has at the same time acquired outright the Rumanian oil which will act like a blood-transfusion on his waning supplies. Without oil the modern military machine cannot run, and Germany's acquisition of this supply is a hard blow to Britain.

I dare say this was one of the developments which British Premier Churchill foresaw in his grim prophecy before the house of commons early this week:

"Great Danger"

"Long, dark months of trial and tribulation lie before us. Not only great dangers but many more misfortunes, many shortcomings, many mistakes, many disappointments will surely be our lot."

That this new offensive is going to produce "trial and tribulation," not only for England but for the other fellows as well, there can be no manner of doubt. It is going to be a fierce and desperate struggle which is likely to drag numerous other countries in as a matter of self preservation.

As the conflict starts to rumble down through the Balkans—that cockpit of southeastern Europe which has been a battle ground for untold centuries—one of the most significant developments to my mind rests in that Turkish official broadcast last night, warning that Germans that any attempt to make a thrust across Turkey and Syria would be met with "very strong resistance."

"This road across Anatolia," the Turks served notice, 'is guarded by 2,000,000 bayonets."

Now the point of this is that Turkey, which has been taking its lead from Russia, would never (in my view) have ventured to make such a defiant threat had it not been sanctioned by the Soviet. I find support for that viewpoint in the fact that the Muscovite ambassador conferred with the Turkish premier not long before the broadcast.

Soviet Antagonistic

This doesn't necessarily mean that Russia is preparing to join the Turks and oppose the axis by arms at this precise juncture. It does mean, to my mind, that the Soviet is bitterly antagonistic to these nazi moves in the Balkans and that there certainly is a possibility of war between Russia and Germany.

Stalin and Hitler are matching wits in a historic drama which has taken them right to the verge of war. Both of them are opportunists, and their actions will be impelled by circumstances. I believe that Stalin will go just as far as seems at all feasible in an effort to halt Hitler, though probably not even the Bolshevist leader can say at this moment whether he should strike now or hold his hand for a more favorable moment, and blink at Hitler's operations.

However that may be, the attitude of Russia is of vast importance as the axis offensive begins. Both Germany and Britain recognize this and are making efforts to win the support of Stalin.

Prison Needs Hit by Judge

Suggests Milwaukee House of Correction Be Used by State

Milwaukee—(AP)—Municipal Judge Max W. Nohl advocates the appointment of a state board of visitors to bring to public attention the condition and needs of the state penal institutions.

"Things aren't what they should be at the various state penal institutions," Nohl said yesterday during the seventh annual meeting of the board of visitors of the Milwaukee House of Correction.

"Through the work of such a board, the public would be informed of whatever is going on in the institutions. I guarantee that conditions at these institutions would be improved 25 per cent to 75 per cent.

"The presence of a board of this kind shows that someone is paying attention to matters of importance to the instituions. Such bodies have been of invaluable help in the many states that have them.

Judge Nohl recommended to the Milwaukee county board, on behalf of the board of visitors, that the state take over the Milwaukee house of correction and use it as an intermediary penal institution.

"By using the house of correction for the less vicious type of offenders, the crowded conditions at the state penitentiary at Waupun would be eliminated," Judge Nohl said.

Heil Says 'Gravy Train Not Running Any More'

Prairie du Chien—(AP)—Governor Heil, campaigning for reelection, declared yesterday that Wisconsin has saved $185,000 a year in executive expenses during his administration.

"More efficient aid to those receiving relief" has saved an additional $1,600,000 a year," Heil said.

"The gravy train isn't running any more."

Heil asserted that "if you like this republic, if you like this country, and if you hate dictatorship in any form," state voters would elect the Republican ticket.

Visitor Finds City Jail Run Down, Inadequate

The average visitor at the police station doesn't take time to notice the condition of the headquarters for city police.

It is, perhaps, because he is worried about a parking ticket, or because the law has caught up with his misdeeds or because he is intent on getting information concerning the law before doing this, that or the other thing.

Close inspection, however, would give him a much different picture than he perhaps has had of the city's sanctum of the law.

As the visitor crossed the threshhold he would notice the bare concrete spots where the floor covering had worn through. He would have a "crowded" feeling as he gazed about the small "reception" room. He would notice the sergeant's desk was just a few feet from the entrance and that chairs were smack against walls to provide a few more inches of floor space.

Leaky Roof

The plastered walls in the receiving room have long since passed the painting stage. Bare spots, with the laths showing, appear on the walls. In the cell room, a light fixure seems to keep the bulging plaster from pulling away entirely from the ceiling. Rain seeping through the roof, and down through the first floor has loosened the plaster so that it has bellied out in a distorted fashion that would worry even an inebriated prisoner.

Some days when the rain is heavy, the policemen look like a bucket brigade in action, what with rushing about to catch the leaking water in pails and other receptacles.

To the left of the main room is a small closet-like room that serves as the office of the police chief. The room also is used for questioning suspects and for the other conferences that frequently are necessary with members of the force. The room is so small that three or four persons fill it to capacity.

Gloomy Appearance

The cell room is gloomy in appearance, and windows injecting shafts of light only add to gloominess. There is a mustiness about the place that reminds one of the days when it was part of the fire department and horses were quartered there.

The cell block has no separate accommodations for women. Until the county jail was razed recently, women prisoners were transferred to the county lock-up.

Another door off the main room opens to a closet where car license records are kept. The place is not lighted and the records must be taken from the room to be inspected.

The second floor, reached by a steep, winding stairway, houses the traffic division office, photographic department and a meeting room. The photographic room is far from adequate.

Bicyclists getting "tickets" for failing to observe rules of safe driving attend the weekly bicycle school which is held at the city hall because there is no available room in the traffic department office. Records are kept in envelopes that are stacked in corners of the office because the one closet has long since been filled.

The policemen, who are expected to be excellent marksmen, have no target range. Regular shooting practice sessions must be held through special arrangements at the armory. This does not permit policemen to practice whenever they have spare time.

Squad cars and motorcycles are kept in a garage so small that the machines must be moved about and shifted whenever a machine is taken out or into the quarters.

State Will Curtail Method of Boosting Lakes' Fish Supply

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Washington—The state conservation department's spawn-fishing method of replenishing the Great Lakes' fish supply, under bitter attack for several years by a group of Lake Michigan fishermen, will be sharply curtailed this year, it was disclosed here today.

Officials reported that as a result of conservation commission action this week the program will be reduced about 50 per cent, partly because of the expense involved, but also because "we're experimenting and we are trying to get more details on results," according to W. J. Aberg, Madison commission spokesman.

Under the spawn-fishing plan, in operation for about a decade, the department licenses certain fishermen to take fish during the closed spawning season. The fishermen turn over the spawn to state hatcheries, and are allowed to keep the fish. The hatcheries in turn produce fry and fingerlings which are replanted in Lake Michigan, Green Bay and Lake Superior. Only lake trout are involved in the program.

A group of professional fishermen from Lake Michigan shore localities, headed by Everette LaFond of Two Rivers, have opposed the program vigorously, arguing that it is not only useless, but positively harmful. If left alone to spawn, nature would produce more young fish than the state hatcheries are able to do, according to this group.

Roosevelt's Inspection Act Slows Production—Johnson

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Chicago—"There will be no protest because the people long ago wearily abandoned principle and surrendered to the what-the-hell philosophy, which holds that any crookedness short of downright criminality is all right if it is clever and produces results." So wrote Westbrook Pegler about what he called the shysteresque cunning and mocking dishonesty of the method by which we sent our destroyers to join the British navy.

Johnson

It is the most certain and unpleasant truth of our times. Marvelous enough is the audacity of such magnificent frauds as the "third term draft," the forcible feeding of Henry Wallace to the Democrats, the methods of the destroyer deal and the attorney general's opinion approving it. The appointment of Elliott and the laughing sneer with which criticism was put aside, more marvelous still is the reckless, audacious constant shoving of this unwilling country into wholly unnecessary war in the Pacific.

But marvelous past the point of understanding is the whipped and beaten public acceptance of these contemptuous affronts to public morals—without resentment, without even important protest. There can be only one credible explanation, the one Pegler has given. This country has become completely slap-happy from repeated jolts to so many of the high principles it once delighted to honor.

Not Ready to Accept Pegler's Philosophy

This being the case in so many more important things, it is probably not worth the effort to comment on the president's "tours of inspection of national defense." Yet to omit comment is to accept Peg's "what-the-hell philosophy," and that I am not ready to do.

The president's story is that he is too busy in Washington with national defense to make any political tours—much less any political speeches, or to debate the issues of this critical campaign. The president's performance is to cover as much electioneering territory as usual; greeting crowds, issuing statements and covering a good deal of his opponent's political itinerary.

But this is not "political." It is just being "too busy with national defense." Does that fool anybody? What difference does that make? It produces many results. Being the performance of an "official duty of national defense," it can be done at public expense. It is very expensive campaigning, but the government itself pays the bill and it cleverly avoids the Hatch act. It uses national defense for a purely partisan political purpose while seeming not to do so. Above all, the whole attitude permits the president to escape debate on his record of uninterrupted seven years' failure in solving our great domestic problems. He couldn't afford to debate that because his record is indefensible.

Inspections Don't Help National Defense

Of course, all that leaves open the only possible justification for his showmanship. What do the president's tours of inspection" of arsenals, proving grounds, arms factories, dams and shipyards do to help national defense? He doesn't know anything about manufacture and scarcely more about technical armament. What we need above all is concentration and speed on armament production and we are not getting them fast enough. What we do not need is the injection of partisan politics and other attractive distractions on the production lines. The president could not bring one ounce of aid by his visits, but he can and does bring plenty of delay and distraction.

Any veteran production manager will tell you that an inspection visit of a big shot to a greater or less degree disorganizes work for two or three days—one day to "pretty up" the works for the inspection party, one day to put on the show and another day to get back to normal.

Wise industrial managers, especially those who did not "come up on the manufacturing side" know this and leave technical administration and inspection to experts.

Thus, from every angle, this inspection act and political abstraction is just another mountain of magnificent bunk.

319 Students Given Tuberculosis Tests

Tuberculin tests were given 145 high school seniors and 174 eighth grade students at a series of clinics in the county this week, according Miss Marie Klein, county nurse. The clinics were held at schools at Kimberly, Little Chute, Freedom, Seymour, Nichols, Mackville, Greenville, Hortonville, Bear Creek, Shiocton and Black Creek.

Gerald Nagel, Alice May Auschutz and Dorothy Archiquette of the Pine Grove school walked five miles to Seymour to get their tests. Marian Zuleger, Arlis Gagman and Violet Zuleger of the Spring Brook school walked three miles to Nichols to take their tests.

PTA Unit to Open Meetings Monday Night

Dr. Flory to Speak At Roosevelt School On 'Teen Age Group

The Roosevelt Parent-Teachers association will open its fall and winter meetings at 7:30 Monday night at the school auditorium, with Dr. Charles Flory, associate professor of education at Lawrence college, as the principal speaker.

Dr. Flory will talk on the 'teen age child. After he has finished his lecture, an open forum discussion on children in this age bracket will be held.

Mrs. F. W. Schneider is president of the Roosevelt PTA. Other officers are Harold Heller, vice president; Dr. O. R. Busch, treasurer; Mrs. William Madson, and Mrs. Frank Hammer, members-at-large; Principal A. G. Oosterhous and Miss Jane Overby, faculty representatives.

Mrs. Schneider reported today that after parents at Monday night's meeting have finished with the forum discussion, conducted by Dr. Flory, on the 'teen age child, they will write out further questions on this subject.

The questions will be placed in a box and a list of them selected for the November meeting. A panel discusison will be held in November dealing with these questions. Dr. Flory will direct the discussion, with two fathers, two mothers, two men faculty members and two women faculty members participating.

Monday night's meeting will open with singing. There will be hostesses to greet the parents on arrival. After Dr. Flory's talk, the open forum discussion, and a business meeting, a social period will be held in the school gymnasium.

Four mothers from each home room at Roosevelt school have been assigned to call parents, urging them to attend the first meeting of the year.

The home room which has the largest representation of parents at the meeting will be presented with a picture. The picture will be in the nature of a "traveling prize," the home rooms competing for it at each monthly meeting.

Were they the "good" old days?

In those days could one shave electrically for a penny a month?—Would 3¢ do the "muscle" part of the family washing or deliver 24 hours of refrigeration?—Would a penny vacuum-clean the rugs and carpets or keep the radio going the best parts of the day?—Would a nickel do the ironing or take the chill out of a frosty room?—Would 5¢ light the home for an average day?

Electricity is doing this in these, the "good new days" — electrical days.

Assemblyman Asks Willkie Election

Wendell Willkie was described as the only hope of America's present system of republican government in a talk by Assemblyman Mark Catlin, Jr., Appleton, at a Republican meeting sponsored by the Shawano county Republican committee at Wittenberg last night.

"I have no choice but to vote and work for Wendell Willkie as the only hope of our present Republican system of government," Catlin said. "I know that Mr. Willkie believes in that system and will try to make it work by reviving private business and enterprise which is the only way to healthy employment and sane government. Judged by the past, Mr. Roosevelt will regard reelection as the final repudiation of the 2-party system and demand for the substitution of a 1-man party government."

Catlin also scored Senator LaFollette's endorsement of a third term for Roosevelt, and speaking of state government, said there are only two considerations of vital importance in the present state campaign. Economy in government and common honesty in administration are the only things really essential, he said, for until these are established there is no use talking about anything else.

Party Leader Accused Of Betraying Secret

Ottawa, Ont.—(AP)—Air Minister C. G. Power charged Conservative Party Leader R. B. Hanson today with betraying a secret "of Britain."

Hanson said in a speech last night that 300 young British airmen are receiving their training at Kingston, Ontario, but that censorship had prevented mention of their presence.

"I may be interned for stating it, but I know it is true," he declared.

In his speech he asserted Canada finally was going ahead with a plan to train 10,000 British airmen "over and above the empire air training scheme" and that Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King refused to agree to the plan two years ago. This, he said, is "the biggest crime against our war effort."

Power, in a statement today, said Hanson was "recruiting for the tory party" and "may have made one recruit. His name is Hitler."

Mulches Can Lessen Winter Hazards to Garden Plants

Winter protection in the garden will soon occupy attention. On the whole, probably more harm than good is accomplished by mulches. But where they are intelligently applied, they can lessen winter hazards considerably.

Rarely is a mulch called for to protect a plant from low temperatures, because few gardeners attempt to keep outdoor plants that are not resistant to freezing. The notable exception to this is in the case of tender roses, which can be killed by subzero temperatures and should be protected from them.

In most other cases, winter damage is done by the heaving action of alternate thaws and freezes, by standing water, rot due to dampness, injury from ice and snow, and in the case of evergreens by excessive drying out from the winter sun and winds.

A mulch which is applied to the ground after it has been frozen will prevent unseasonable thaws, and thus serve to reduce heaving, dampness and standing water. But the nature of the mulch should vary according to the plants protected. There are some plants which do not die down to the ground when winter sets in, but retain a crown above the surface which should live through. Foxgloves and canterbury bells are examples. Any perennial which on examination after freezing weather is seen to have top growth still alive belongs in this class. It is important that such plants shall not be smothered by a mulch which shuts out air, since this usually results in rotting and death. In such cases a mulch of corn stalks, evergreen boughs, pruned stems of shrubs, or even an upturned basket—any material which will shade the ground without shutting out the air, should be chosen. Plants of this class should be in the high spots of the border where surface water drains quickly.

For plants whose tops disappear entirely in winter, a mulch of leaves, straw or manure is satisfactory. But when such plants are well established they do not need a mulch. If newly planted in well-spaded soil, heaving action will be exaggerated and there will be a lack of roots to anchor the plants so that a mulch for the first season is advisable. The need is greater, the later planting has been done. This same rule applies to fall bulbs which need protection only when planted somewhat late in newly spaded soil. A rule which should not be forgotten is that mulches should never be applied to the ground until it has frozen.

Johnson Found Guilty of U. S. Tax Evasion

ants to remain at liberty under bond.

Before taking the case yesterday afternoon the jury had listened to five weeks of testimony which opened the lid on the city's gambling industry.

Prosecutors told the jury that Johnson started out 20 years ago as a small time gambler in a small handbook and finally wound up as "czar of Chicago gambling with a system rivaling the Federal Reserve bank."

Johnson testified that he was a crap shooter by profession, admitting owning the real estate under some of the gambling spots, but denied ownership of the establishments. His activities, he said, were profitable. For example, they permitted him to invest $365,000—in cash—for a half interest in the Bon Air Country club as well as $350,000 cash for a country estate.

Prosecutors said the syndicate operated at least 23 places, connected with a private telephone system. A central depot supplied them with gambling equipment. A syndicate currency exchange handled the banking.

One witness testified that the syndicate spent $40,000 in four years on free bus transportation for customers. Another told of a syndicate school for gambling house employes where they learned the fine points of dice handling.

Many single attacks also were directed against railroad facilities and armament plants in south England and in Scotland, the communique added.

Laymen are in Quandry About Business Laws

Interpretations by New Dealers are Confusing—Lawrence

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — What is the law? Laymen can hardly know, unless they are business men trying to operate their enterprises under the complicated rules laid down by the Roosevelt administration, how actually contradictory and confusing are the outgivings of the various law officers of the government itself in interpreting the statutes.

Lawrence

Thus, on one day, the National Labor Relations board says its own orders are not binding until affirmed by the courts and, on another occasion, the attorney general says they are, even before the courts act. What is a business man to do?

Recently Attorney General Jackson raised a furore over the defense contract situation by saying that findings of the labor board to the effect that an employer violated the Wagner law were "binding and conclusive upon other agencies of the executive branch of the government uness and until these findings are reversed by a court of competent jurisdiction." He said this was "too clear to admit of controversy," and when the protests came from members of the defense commission, particularly William Knudsen, and from army and navy officials that this was going too far, Mr. Jackson transferred the blame to the vague statement of policy made by the defense commission itself last September.

New Status?

But, while it appears that the move was merely a political sop to the CIO leaders, who had been demanding this sort of interference with defense contract awards, and while it is now being soft-pedaled as meaningless in New deal quarters, American business men who have nothing to do with the defense program and lawyers who are concerned about the operations of the National Labor Relations law are wondering whether the attorney general knew what he was talking about and whether he has established a new status for labor board findings, or whether he slipped and made a flatly erroneous statement.

The subject has been before the courts already and the labor board has taken a position hitherto which is contrary to what Mr. Jackson has held.

Less than three years ago the National Labor Relations board issued an order, giving its findings against the Consolidated Edison company of New York. Fearing that the board's order would be made effective during the time needed to take an appeal, the company asked the United States circuit court of appeals in New York to issue an order temporarily holding up the operation of the board's order till an appeal could be heard The labor board in a reply formally filed with the court and signed by all three members of the board and by Charles Fahy, general counsel of the board, said:

Fahy's Statement

"As this court has already recognized and determined, the board's orders are not self-enforcing and carry no sanctions until reviewed and affirmed by action of a circuit court of appeals under the procedure of review and enforcement provided for in sections 10 (E) and 10 (F) of the act. . . In the Dupont case, this court expressly declared that the act does not permit or require actual enforcement of the order of the board or imposition of penalties until there has been a full judicial review in the ordinary way. . . . No final order can be issued even by the board until after full hearing. Such order would be wholly ineffective and inoperative unless it is approved and enforcement ordered by the appropriate court of appeals or district court under section 10 (C)'"

General Counsel Fahy, who has recently gone over to the department of justice to become assistant solicitor general, had this to say in the same document filed with the court:

"Under the very terms of the statutory procedure, therefore, the order does not of itself disturb the status quo existing prior to its issuance. It is only after final review followed by a decree of a circuit court of appeals affirming and directing the enforcement of an order of the board that the status quo of any party thereto is affected. Until the board's order here, therefore, is so reviewed and affirmed and a decree of this court issues enforcing it, petitioners (employers) are under no compulsion to comply with the board's order. No penalties of any kind will in the interim accrue."

Court Confirmation

When the defense commission last September expressed the hope that employers having contracts with the government would "comply" with the labor laws, it meant by the word "comply" what the courts have understood the term to mean, namely, that an employer is not a violator until the labor board's order or findings have been affirmed by a court.

But Mr. Jackson endeavored to put the defense commission in the position of having declared in favor of compliance with the findings of the labor board even before an order by the board had been affirmed by a court. This is such a novel interpretation that it is a matter of general concern now among those studying the legal aspects of employer an demploye relations just what new wrinkle the attorney general had in mind.

If the attorney general made a mistake, lawyers and business men concerned would like to have it cleared up; and if Mr. Jackson on the other hand, has some basis for introducing new punishments to take effect on employers, they want to know it, not from an "informal" ruling, but from a formal opinion such as Mr. Jackson promised to render if requested "through the usual channels."

This incident illustrates the instability of the administration's law enforcing departments and tends to build up the impression that the department of justice makes its opinions fit political aims rather than the letter or the spirit of the law.

Government Intends to be Firm, Without Baiting Japan

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Japan's attitude appears to be moderating. If that definitely proves to be the case the tension may ease somewhat, because this government, while intending to be firm, is not looking for a pretext to fight in the Far East.

Official dispatches give signs of a more temperate atmosphere in Tokio.

Clapper

There also seemed to be a conciliatory note in the broadcast remarks of Foreign Minister Matsuoka, expressing the earnest wish that the war not spread further and particularly that the United States not become involved. Furthermore, Japan appears reluctant to make an issue of the reopening of the Burma road.

Regardless of day-to-day shifts in the situation, and it does shift almost hourly as the dispatches come in to Washington, certain definite considerations are guiding this government in its effort to preserve the delicate balance between peace and war. It is a delicate balance, because without any pretense of being neutral we are trying to exert our pressure on the situation by measures short of war.

First, we are primarily concerned with giving all possible aid to Britain. Aircraft production is being speeded up under new British pressure for more planes. As our people see it, the crux of the world struggle still is in Europe, between Germany and Britain. Survival of British sea power takes top place on the wish list of the United States, so far as the outside world is concerned.

Second, we are concerned that Japan not use the confused state of the world as a cover for an advance southward that would fence off the Pacific As a first-rank power desiring to trade all over the world, we do not wish to be crowded back so that we can venture across the Pacific only with the consent of Tokio. We are hoping that at least part of the world across the Pacific will continue as in the past to be free for American commerce.

Third, in that matter our interest runs parallel with Britain's and we are pursuing a closely cooperative policy to that end. The amount of pressure that will be applied depends largely upon what Japan does. By reopening the Burma road, Britain is giving the signal that renewed aid to China is in mind In reserve are numerous measures which can be taken to tighten embargoes on shipments to Japan and on her exports to us. Beyond that is the blockade weapon, which can be applied by submarines and light craft. Thus, long before the battle fleet would be called into play other measures are available.

Facts Important in Midst of Loose Talks

Naturally, Japan is as familiar with all these possibilities as we are, and that fact alone is counted upon to have a restraining effect in Tokio, especially since this government is being careful not to take provocative measures but simply to make a firm stand. The reluctance of the United States to use drastic embargo weapons is plain. In fact this administration has been criticized widely for not having used this weapon ruthlessly against Japan. We are interested in maintaining the status quo, and only as Japan threatens it is this government putting on additional pressure.

It is important that American citizens know these facts because of the volume of loose political talk kicking around now. Some are saying that Washington is trying to get us into the war in the Far East. They are also saying that Washington has not been hard enough on Japan, that tighter embargoes should have been ordered long ago and that we should give more aid to China. More ruthless handling in Washington might have had us at war by now, and a weaker policy might have encouraged the Japanese to go all out for greater east Asia

I have talked with enough of our officials to be convinced that they are working at this delicate problem with skill and with the dual purpose of keeping us out of war while trying to protect the long-range interests of the United States.

It is delicate business, and our government must operate with its cards pretty well spread out on the table, whereas it is dealing with a military autocracy that can ignore public opinion and suppress political attacks.

We did have a slogan that politics stops at the water's edge, but that has gone with the wind. The line between fair discussion of foreign affairs and demagogic appeals has been trampled down in the scramble to beat Roosevelt at any price

French Troops Took Offensive In World War 25 Years Ago

BY VIOLA HELLERMANN

Twenty-five years ago this month Europe was well into its second year of a great war, as it is today, but there the parallel ends. France was still a powerful contender then, and she and England were engaged in October, 1915, in what they called "the great offensive." The battle site was not the air over London and Berlin, as today, but the fields of France and Belgium.

The first week of "the great offensive" ended Oct. 2 with nearly a million men locked in death struggles in the Artois and Champagne regions. The allies claimed the capture of nearly 30,000 prisoners and reported German casualties of more than 150,000. Berlin, on the other hand, reported more than 12,000 prisoners had been taken by the Germans and described the allies' losses as enormous.

More conflicting reports came at the end of the second week, when Germany reported that the allies' attempt to break the German lines had not only failed but also had not even altered the military plans of the German staff. No new regiments had to be sent to the western front, Germany claimed. But from Paris came the statement that German resistance was breaking down. In the Champagne region, it was reported, the German second line trenches were crumbling.

The allies' hopes were dealt a severe blow in the Balkans, however, early in October, 1915, when Bulgaria decided to join the Austro-German forces, bringing the thirteenth power into the conflict. German leaders hailed the move as their greatest diplomatic victory and declared the German military victory over Russia was responsible. The Balkans were until then uncertain which was the stronger nation, they said, but now they know their future was with Germany.

Riots In Moscow

Rumblings of the approaching Russian revolution were beginning to be felt in Moscow, where street rioting and student strikes resulted in the death of several persons and the wounding of many more. Russian aristocrats and merchants attributed the crisis to Jewish treason, the activity of Free Masons and the influence of Count Witte, a dispatch told American newspaper readers.

Although they were neither as intense nor as frequent as today, London had its trouble with air raids in 1915, too. During the night of Oct. 13, it was officially announced, 41 persons were killed and 101 wounded in a Zeppelin raid, bringing the total casualties in air attacks on England to 167 killed and 436 wounded in the war thus far. Bitter denunciation against the government's delay in providing better defense against aerial attack filled London newspapers the next day. The Daily Chronicle charged, "The plain fact is that apart from wind and weather London has no adequate protection against Zeppelins."

The situation at the Dardanelles also made the English unhappy. Lord Milner, an authority on the east, declared it would be better to admit defeat at the Dardanelles then than later and urged that the siege be abandoned.

The United States was beginning to think of preparedness. At a meeting of his new navy board in Washington, President Wilson said, "I think the whole nation is convinced that we ought to be prepared not for war, but for defense." Thomas Edison presided at the board meeting, which was attended by eminent inventors and scientists. Wilson asked them to unite with the government in establishing "a defense that would command the respect of the entire world."

On Oct. 15 Wilson gave final approval to the naval program of Secretary Daniels. Airplanes were included in the program for the first time in American history.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sasman have returned from a six days trip to Valparaiso, Ind., Evanston, Ill., and Madison. They had a narrow escape from a cyclone in Illinois after leaving Valparaiso on their return trip. The cyclone was just ahead of them. The roof of one home was in the road and had to be cleared before traffic could move.

They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Grandy as far as Brown Deer, who spent the time with their son, Charles Grandy.

War and Peace

How different are the ways of peace and of war!

A little girl stricken with the dread infantile paralysis, lies in an iron lung in a Wisconsin hospital, machinery forcing vital breath into her lungs. One night the nurse notices the machine is not working properly, that the little girl is gasping for breath.

An emergency call goes out to the fire department, which never sleeps in its efforts to save life and property. A squad responds. The girl is removed from the lung. Firemen administer artificial respiration, doing the job of the complicated machine. For two hours they keep it up while the broken part is repaired by mechanics rushed to the city for the job.

The girl goes back into the iron lung and the machine carries on again. There is no guarantee that she will eventually recover, but she is given the chance to recover.

The scene switches to bomb-scarred England. It is a country school with about 25 children and their teacher playing in the schoolyard at recess. The children live in a rural region and haven't seen a German raider yet.

Suddenly there is thunder in the sky; it roars down upon them. A black-hulled plane dives on the yard and sleek, innocent-looking projectiles fall lazily from its belly. They smash around and into the schoolyard, blasting up the dirt, barely missing the children. The plane roars away, suddenly turns and dives upon them again. This time the zing-zing of bullets replaces the shriek and the blasting of bombs. The Nazi is machine-gunning the children.

Most of them have fled to safety in the schoolyard shelter, and they sit in quiet for 15 minutes. Horror-stricken they emerge into the sunlight again. But they have barely resumed their grim play when the plane, which has been loitering in the clouds, returns again and dives and squirts out its deadly bullets. This time as it passes close overhead they catch a glance of a wild-eyed youth at the controls, pulling his triggers.

When it's all over there isn't any more school for that day. No more for ever in fact for several of the tots.

In America it is the spirit of peace, all energies directed to saving lives, no matter how slim the chance of success. Nothing in the country is more precious than its children. In England it is war, and war is a hell beyond the belief of anyone who has not seen it.

But it cannot be said that it will always be thus in America. It cannot be concluded that Americans will always revere the spark of life that burns so mystically. It cannot be charged that Europeans hold life less dear than we under similar circumstances.

The conclusion must be that in war there is only one consideration—Victory. Everything must be sacrificed toward that end. Bluntly must it be emphasized that life is not as important as victory. The life and honor of the state become separate considerations from the life and honor of its individual members. That is what makes war so terrible to the individual. He ceases to be an individual.

If only America could be certain that the little girl so laboriously saved from death would not in some future year be stricken by a bomb hurtled out of the sky, aimed not at her in particular but at humanity in general!

A Nobleman of Nature Dies

When Sir Wilfred Grenfell ceased to breathe the world lost one of those remarkable fellows who combined a great heart with a sound head.

Grenfell obtained his title because the English king wished to give him distinction as a reward. In fact he was Dr. Grenfell for a period of half a century. During that time he brought his ministrations to those abandoned and secluded spots upon this earth where he felt sure the absence of medical aid meant highly increased agony.

Grenfell started out in London among the slum poor. Few places have more slums or more poor. He ministered to the sick and ailing for the love of mankind and the glory of benefiting others. But his greatest work was in the north, from Labrador out into the farthest reaches of the Arctic where the cold is paralyzing and congeals the very marrow in one's bones. This work did not involve merely establishing a base and permitting the sick to come to him for help. The sick couldn't come. Dr. Grenfell had to travel afoot and by dog team over the wildest stretches of barren ice, constantly imperiling his own safety just for the purpose of getting to some spot where men were suffering.

He actually carried on this work of danger and privation for 42 years until a chronic heart ailment forced him to quit.

His name belongs among that numerous galaxy of brilliant humanitarians who have devoted themselves to the most forlorn of humans to bring brightness into a leper's cottage or an eskimo's igloo.

Russia and the Great Plan

The English censor permits the cabling to this country of cleverly written news interviews designed to create an impression with the American reader that Russia may break loose from her present associates.

Our rulers at Washington assist in this design of building up hope where practical men would have no hope. The last of such items had to do with a conference between the Russian ambassador and our State Department, all dolled up and dandied, to make it appear that perhaps Russia was drawing away from the three-pointed Axis.

Russia may be depended upon to be cold, ignorant and treacherous. Any further dependence upon her is sheer recklessness.

Someone should warn the people of America, and keep warning them, that there is a gigantic scheme at large in the world to get America into this war as an active participant.

And warnings should be likewise drummed into our people that the means employed to this end will never include a knock on the door and a straightforward, "Will you join up?"

Instead, with the swelling tones heard from a great cathedral organ, an inspiring melody will be played.

It will include thunder and lightning from the skies, the sweet smiles of little children, the courageous action of many men and the unyielding conduct of splendid women. But there will be false notes in the great overture, purposely put there to make harmony and with the expectation of creating a final opinion with the American people, not only that they should wage war but that they may do so effectively and with excellent chances of victory.

The news items about Russia are now being practiced. They are one of the false notes in the rendition. Americans know that the Russian government and that of the Germans and Italians differ only in methods of administration. At Berlin and Rome there is less cruelty, less swinishness, and more of the simple virtues because there is more intelligence than at Moscow. Otherwise, differences are not discernable.

But when all stops are pulled on that great cathedral organ there will peal forth the tremendous and crashing notes of the most skilled organist who ever swayed millions to their injury. Will Americans be able to hold their seats? Did they gain from their experience in 1917 or have they learned anything of the ways of the world since?

Graft and Loot, High and Low

Down in Cleveland, Ohio, Albert Ruddy, president of a council that comprised the carpenters' unions in a very populous area, has just been convicted by a jury of extorting $8,500 from building contractors under the threat of calling union men off construction jobs.

There was a flowing stream of evidence agains Ruddy that could not be resisted. One builder established that he paid Ruddy $5,000 to let him put up a grain elevator. Three other builders swore they paid him a total of $3,500 so he wouldn't call workmen off their jobs. Ruddy was rather systematic. His fee on homes was only $50 to $100 depending upon the cost. But Ruddy was an ex-convict. He had been convicted years ago of using his union influence for this same purpose of extortion. He is the fourth Cleveland labor leader to be convicted by juries since that city started to clean up a mess that had become too smelly.

Fellows of this kind probably reason to themselves that they are only taking a little profit from the contractors, and always imagine that the contractors make big profits or are rich anyway. In fact, although a contractor may be hurt at the outset of this practice, it is the builder of the little home or the big elevator, in other words the consumer, who is always eventually stung. The principle, and its operation, is identical with that of looting the common treasury of our country.

And that is why, we think, that Ruddy and his kind, wrong though they be, are entitled to a word of sympathy at a time when the greatest looters are cheered by a populace still blind.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

FRIENDSHIP

"You lose your friends when your money goes,
For then you can borrow and never lend!"
But she answered firmly, as one who knows:
"Not if you are yourself a friend!"

More friends than one in the carefree crowd
Who swarmed to fortune like honey bees
Will come like sunlight when sorrows cloud
Your days with poignant miseries.

For since you always have been a friend
And given so freely of your heart's store,
You will walk with love to the green trail's end,
And the last Friend stops at your open door.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(Editor's Note—The Brass Ring, awarded this week to Nelson Rockefeller, Latin American "coordinator" of the National Defense Commission, is good for one free ride on The Washington Merry-Go-Round.)

Washington—When Harry Hopkins first proposed that Nelson Rockefeller be appointed coordinator of Latin American affairs of the National Defense commission, there arose a mighty howl from the state department.

Mr. Rockefeller, the state department claimed, smelled too much of oil. His grandfather's and his father's oil companies had been down in Latin America battling the Mexican government, and the Bolivian and Colombian governments. So, the state department argued, young Rockefeller would begin his job with two strikes against him.

The White House, concerned over these arguments, held up the Rockefeller appointment for approximately three months; finally bowed to the persuasive influence of Harry Hopkins and appointed the young millionaire anyway. Since then two things have happened:

1. The state department has gone its own polite and dignified way, ignoring whenever possible the existence of anyone named Rockefeller.

2. The refreshing Mr. Rockefeller seems to have justified all that Harry Hopkins ever said about him by unobtrusively but energetically making good. In the short time he has been functioning under the long-winded title of "Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics" he has really breathed new life into one of the most important fields of American foreign affairs.

To get the complete picture, you have to know a bit more about young Mr. Rockefeller. The woods are full of Rockefellers. This particular one is 32 years old, the second son of John D., Jr. He has five children, including twins, and sometimes is described as the Rockefeller who has taken most interest in Radio City (Rockefeller Center), of which he is a director, and also helped to build up the Museum of Modern Art.

But in Latin America, young Rockefeller had carved out a unique distinction even before he accepted his present post on the Defense commission. He had gone down to Venezuela in connection with his family's oil companies, and had become impressed with the idea that American business in Latin America had to be more than a leech industry—had to do more than drill wells and suck oil out of the ground.

Furthermore, and particularly in Venezuela, he saw that after that country had exhausted the one commodity upon which it had been so dependent, economic chaos would follow together with the same policy applied in Mexico—expropriation.

So young Rockefeller began working on the idea of diversifying Venezuela's industries and diversifying them on a partnership basis. In other words, instead of merely bringing more American capital to Venezuela, he set up a company in which local money joined with him in building a hotel in Caracas to be operated jointly by American and Venezuelan directors.

This is one of Rockefeller's objectives as coordinator of Latin American affairs on the defense council—namely, to set up corporations in which Latin American capital will mix with American money, in contrast to the old practice of Yankee exploitation with Yankee dollars.

"There is no point," says Rockefeller, "in trying to tug the Latins to our side in a tug of war with the Germans. What we want to do is help them in developing economic independence. They have fought for economic independence before and they can do it again. In that fight, we are with them."

This is a point on which the state department and Mr. Rockefeller see eye to eye. Actually, the state department, under the far-sighted Good Neighbor policy devised by Sumner Welles, already had joined U. S. and Brazilian capital to build a new steel mill in Brazil.

When Bill Knudsen, Edward Stettinius and other moguls of the National Defense commission go to the White House every Thursday to report on defense progress, Nelson Rockefeller goes with them. However, it would take a long stretch of the imagination to bring under "defense" the full scope of Rockefeller's ambitious plans for closer friendship below the Rio Grande.

To accomplish this, he has brought into his office one of the most diversified groups of experts recently seen in Washington. It includes:

Will Clayton—of the cotton merchandising firm of Clayton and Anderson, who tangled with AAA crop control in the early New Deal days, turned in disgust to Brazil and has now taught the Brazilians to grow more cotton and gin it better.

Joseph C. Rovensky—vice president of the Chase National Bank and one of the experts on German currency and barter trade, the chief type of competition which the United States faces in South America.

Robert G. Caldwell—dean of humanities at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; born in Bogota and former Minister to Portugal and Bolivia. He will handle Rockefeller's cultural relations.

Carl Speath—a classmate of Rockefeller's at Dartmouth, who later handled much of his work in Venezuela and is now his personal assistant.

A. V. Cory—a geologist from Butte, Montana, with active mining experience in Brazil and Argentina.

Henry A. Moe—formerly of the Guggenheim Memorial foundation, who will now direct the division of scholarships for Rockefeller, a most important job if there is to be real interchange of students in the Western Hemisphere.

REAL GOOD NEIGHBORLINESS

The group also includes treasury expert Simon G. Hansen; newsman John Clark, in charge of press relations; George (Ben) Franklin, secretary to Rockefeller; and Arthur Ballantine, Jr., son of the former assistant secretary of the treasury.

Many of these men speak Spanish, some even speak Portuguese. They are young, enthusiastic, tireless in their effort to do a real job of good neighborliness in Latin America, and in the end should be able to smooth out friction with the state department.

Real fact is that the state department's political policy in Latin America has been the most successfully and judiciously handled in years. But the department has neither the personnel nor the time to concentrate on commercial and cultural relations as much as the present emergency requires.

So if a harmonious partnership can be worked out with the energetic Rockefeller—a partnership which sometimes is difficult in an administration in which personalities play such a dominant role—then the Good Neighbor policy really should go places in Latin America.

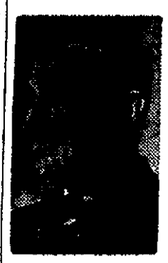
A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—There are many requests for explanations of selective service rulings. Here are some of the questions and answers.



Stinnett

Q. My birthday is October 17. On that date I will be 36. Am I subject to registration?

A. Certainly. The law says that any man between the ages of 21 and 36 (that is, if on that date you ARE 21 or 35) you must register. Thus, if you are 21 on that date or 36 the day after, you must register.

Q. I am taking an automobile trip on October 14. On October 16, I will be in Grand Canyon National park. Where do I register?

A. In Grand Canyon National Park. Under the Selective Service regulations, if a person subject to registration is out of his state or registration district and CAN NOT GET BACK, he must register in the registration district in which he is staying. In the case of National Parks, provision is made for the National Director to register not only all residents in his park, but all visitors. In the case of visitors, these cards are sent back to home states for handling. There are 22 national parks in which this ruling holds true. The ruling also applies to CCC camps, to men on vacation but traveling outside their state or district, to visitors on Indian reservations.

Q. I am ill in a hospital. How can I register?

A. Provision will be made through your county clerk to register you, just as if you were in your own registration district.

Q. I am ill at home. I can not get out to register. What must I do to avoid penalties under the law?

A. Deputize a competent person to register for you. In this instance, the person you deputize will act as registrar for you. With, of course, the permission of the local board. If you are too ill or quarantined on registration day, present yourself to your local board as soon as possible and under these circumstances, have a physician's certificate or other competent evidence on hand to prove your case.

Q. I am going to be out of the United States on registration day. What must I do to avoid the penalties of non-registration?

A. Present yourself to your local board within five days after you get back in the United States, offer them proof that you were outside the United States on October 16 (a ticket stub, stamped passport, reports from your local newspaper, or affidavits from responsible neighbors would be evidence enough) and register in the ordinary manner.

Q. I am subject to selective service registration, but at present am in a reformatory. Will I get in more trouble if I do not register?

A. Not unless you fail to register on the date of expiration of your sentence. This ruling also applies to persons in insane asylums, jails and penitentiaries. Such persons will be registered 'on the day of discharge" by the superintendent or warden of the institution and your responsibility from there on is to your local registration board in the voting precinct in which you formerly had residence.

Q. My working hours are such that I can't get to the registration board on October 16. What do I do?

A. If your employer prevents your getting there on that day, he is obstructing selective service and subject to penalties under the law. In most cases registration day will be a holiday and persons who have to work on holidays will be given time off to register.

SEEKS SOME ANSWERS

Editor Post-Crescent—We must write as many letters as we can to Congress and to our friends in other states, especially the states of New York and Montana (Pittman the friend of Russia) and beg these friends to write to their representatives in Congress for the answer to these questions:

Has Mr. Hull, the Secretary of State told Lord Lothian, that, if the British Imperialists open the Burma Road, the United States will help them fight?

If Hull has done this, what right has he to barter the lives of American boys to keep the possessions of a few wealthy families in China?

For whom is Mr. Hull working? Is he working for these few families who have exploited the Chinese for many centuries, or is he working for the people of America?

How would Mr. Hull and Mr. Wells, his under-secretary, like a trip to Singapore as guests of the American people? Possibly they could make room for Lord Lothian who dare not return to England. The poor survivors of the terrible blitzkrieg in England have had their eyes opened. In a few weeks they will follow the example of France and arrest all the blundering Churchills and other stooges of the international gangsters who call themselves "Great Britain."

Don't you think it is time to bring Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles before you (Congress) and question them in regard to their relations with the Imperialists?

An American Mother.

Watchman, Stick to the Ramparts!

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — Although the crucial Nov. 5 deadline is nearing rapidly, Wisconsin Democrats show no evidence that they are out to collect votes for their state ticket this fall.

Wyngaard

Since the acid proceedings at their state platform convention here Oct. 1, when the meeting blew up into factions even more rabidly divided than in previous months, there has been no activity except some more scrapping about the appointment of an executive secretary.

Apparently state headquarters has mapped no campaign routes for the candidates on the state ticket thus far. Francis E. McGovern, candidate for governor who was highly riled when a conservative majority at the platform convention repudiated his wishes, has not been heard from although Loomis and Heil are beating the highways in an eager race for November ballots.

Observers are beginning to ask whether the factionalism and defeatism in the party has sapped its spirits, or whether, perhaps, the New Deal campaign chest is being withheld again.

DYKSTRA STORY

The formal announcement from Washington this week that President C. A. Dykstra of the state university had been offered the position of national selective service boss may have surprised a lot of Wisconsin people, including those at the university, but not the insiders in the Heil administration.

One of Heil's closest advisors disclosed, in confidence, to this correspondent fully three weeks ago that the proxy would be offered the assignment. Apparently Dykstra had sought advice from the executive office when the job was originally tendered to him.

LOBBYING

One reason, probably, for the delay in the selection by Governor Heil of the local selective service boards for Wisconsin (which as this is written have not yet been announced although they were due a week ago) is explained in some of the complaints of Heil headquarters men.

Apparently the executive office has been besieged with applicants for the jobs. Even some of the more prominent members of the legislature, ever solicitious for the well-being of their constituents, have not been above putting in a word for a candidate here and there.

Note: In some other states, Ohio for example, the executive solved the selection problem by picking public officials, including judges, to serve on the county draft boards.

TEACHERS

Governor Heil is making a special point in his campaign speeches to report that he is paying his obligations to the teachers' retirement fund, something which recent governors before him failed to do.

From their public statements and private comments, however, leaders of teachers' organizations appear to be more interested in their tenure legislation than in the retirement fund, which is relatively stable financially despite huge deficits in state payments in recent years.

Progressives have always looked upon teachers, as a group, as favorable to their cause, and the former are now losing no opportunities to point out that it was a Progressive legislature which enacted a teacher tenure law in the exact language and form desired by the teacher lobbyists, while it was a Republican legislature dominated by rural representatives which at several points threatened its complete extinction. Moreover, teachers are far from confident of the fate of their tenure program at the hands of the next legislature.

Personal Health Talks

IODINE AND PYORRHEA

Numerous correspondents have assured me, within the past few years, that the Iodin Ration (for instructions for taking the Iodin Ration send stamped envelope bearing your address) and periodic applications of diluted Talbot's solution (glycerite of iodine and zinc iodide, N. F.) to the gums and teeth in the manner the dentist instructs has brought about great improvement, some say a complete cure of pyorrhea or chronic gingivitis or inflammation of gums and tooth sockets.

The diluted Talbot's solution now included in the National Formulary (standard formulas followed by all druggists) is not nearly so strong as the solution originally suggested to dentists and physicians by the late Dr. Eugene Talbot. But it is probably as strong as a layman may safely use even under the instruction of his or her physician or dentist. Talbot gave the formula for his solution in the Jour. A. M. A. April 2, 1910. He suggested that the physician or dentist apply it to the gums and buccal surfaces adjacent to the teeth a few minutes before mouth or tonsil operations, or at regular intervals in the treatment of pyorrhea. He suggested that an application once a month in children's mouths would prevent tooth decay. I repeat, Talbot's solution is safely applied to teeth or gums or inner surfaces of cheeks only under the supervision of your own physician or dentist.

It is absurd to hope that the use of any such remedy can be of avail in long neglected pyorrhea, after the vital tisuses of the tooth sockets and gums have atrophied and shrunk. But if used in the earlier stages of pyorrhea before degeneration has progressed too far, the Iodin Ration internally and Talbot's solution locally will give considerable benefit.

In conjunction with this treatment, I conclude from my own study of the scientific literature up to the present date, that habitual prolonged moderate deficiency in vitamin intake must be concerned in the development of pyorrhea. From all the available observations made upon this point I infer that the daily intake of vitamin A, vitamin D and vitamin C is important—that these vitamins are most likely to be deficient in the diet and that they are especially essential for normal development and maintenance of the teeth, gums, tooth sockets and jaws.

If I had any indication of pyorrhea I'd continue taking the Iodin Ration (I take that anyway, as a mtter of health conservation, as I believe nearly every one should), and I'd apply diluted Talbot's solution to teeth and gums once a week or two, and I'd supplement my diet by taking, along with breakfast every day, or with any other meal, one super-vitamin capsule containing 15,000 units of vitamin A, 1,500 units of vitamin D, 10 mgs. vitamin C, 600 units B., 100 gammas of B-2, enough of all the essential vitamins to insure adequate intake even tho the diet be poor in vitamins. I'd continue these three measures not just for a while but the year around.

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

Marshal Petain, who was once a hero of France, is certainly not making any halfway job of rubbing out that memory. The old general, who only a couple of decades ago fought with the British and United States against Germany, now climbs even deeper into Hitler's lap and announces that France must never have any future friendship with England, America or any other old pals.

If Henri is right then it's okay for a drowning man to sue the fellow who called the lifeguard and follow this up by denouncing the lifeguard and abolishing the lifesaving station.

I think even the Hitlers, the Mussolinis, the Matsuokas and the Quislings are easier on the eyes than Petain. On the other hand, I suppose the old marshal is just being made to jump through a pretzel.

Petain even scraps Rousseau's doctrine of the natural equality of man. He kicks out every vestige of democracy in his new constitution and comes out for a bigger and better goosestep.

But he can't be talking for the real France. Wait until the people of that country really digest things. It's something Petain ate. And he talks like he's been eating pigs knuckles and sauerkraut three times a day.

Plans for Draft Registration at New London Set

Volunteer Registrars Sworn; Schools, Voting Places to be Centers

New London — Plans for the selective service registration in New London were set in readiness when 37 volunteer registrars were sworn in at an instruction meeting at the city hall council chambers last night.

In attendance besides the New London volunteers were men from the surrounding townships who will conduct the registration at their respective voting precincts. County Clerk L. J. Steiger outlined the work of the registrars.

All males between the ages of 21 and 35 inclusive will be required to register for selective service on that day. They may register wherever they may be regardless of where they live, but if at home they should register at their regular election voting place. Babson Thinks Small Firms are Best in Long Run

Says He Would Rather Work for Small Outfit Than Big Corporation

BY ROGER BABSON

Babson Park, Mass.—The 1940 tax legislation shows how the American people are thinking. One of its most interesting features is that the excess profits tax law favors companies having earnings of less than $25,000 a year. Of course, this is a direct subsidy to smaller corporations.

Babson

Should the $25,000 apply to earnings of a company or to earnings of individual stockholders in that company? Is there any reason why a 10-share stockholder in a large corporation should be taxed any more than if he held the same amount of stock in a small company? It certainly seems unfair to penalize with more taxes, direct or indirect, a man who receives earnings from dividends of $5,000 from each of five big companies, and let go "scot free" one who has earnings from dividends up to $25,000 from one small company.

This is not a criticism of the tax law. I use it merely as an illustration to show the trend against bigness even though bigness often means efficiency from which consumers benefit. In talking with congressmen, however, I find that other factors are also working in favor of the smaller concerns. Let me mention some of them:

Fear of Monopolies

All the political parties in their platforms have taken a stand against monopolies, even though they may reduce consumer prices in many instances. Monopolies are contrary to democracies. Congressmen are especially bitter against them because of a monopoly's ability to hire high-priced lobbiests. Some congressmen tell me that these lobbiests threaten to spike their election if they vote for anti-monopoly legislation. Yet, there is no reason why our biggest corporations, even those having monopolies, cannot operate as justly in the interests of the public as smaller concerns. It is, however, hard to make John Public believe this.

Perhaps much legislation against bigness is due to the "inferiority complex" of the small manufacturer. Doubtless it is difficult for many such to compete with big corporations; but the reason often is due to the plant being located in the wrong locality or being operated inefficiently. Certainly, small corporations should be able to change their policy and their products much more rapidly than large corporations and thus keep ahead of them. If a young man, I would rather work for a small corporation than a big one. Chances for advancement are much better.

Decentralization Trend

The war is bound to have tremendous effects along various lines. Of all changes, effect upon the decentralization of industries may be most important. The current idea that shirts can be manufactured more efficiently in a single place and under one roof may seem sound on paper. Textile manufacturers in England, however, have found that, in practice, they are liable to lose their own shirts as well as their employees by such a policy.

The attitude of labor leaders in large cities is also a factor in decentralization. The CIO has been much more successful in closing plants in the case of big concerns operating under one roof in one locality. Manufacturers are fast learning that it is bad business from a labor point of view to have "all one's eggs in one basket." Letters which I receive from abroad show clearly that it is safer in every way to have five plants, each employing a thousand people in five different cities, than to have one big plant employing five thousand in one locality. After the war, it may be illegal in England and on the continent to build a factory to employ in one locality more than a thousand—perhaps even than five hundred.

Good News

All of the above should be good news for smaller concerns, operated by the owners, — especially by those who founded the business. Certainly, one concern employing a thousand workers in one locality should be able to operate as efficiently—yes, more so—than a big concern with five plants in five different cities. The chief advantage that the big concern has is in connection with advertising. A page in a newspaper or magazine does not cost the big concern any more than it does the small concern, and yet the cost to the big concern per unit sold should be only one-fifth.

Furthermore, this new trend should help the credit of smaller independent concerns. Banks and investors are hipped on "blue-chips." They think loans should be made only to big companies and shares purchased only in the biggest of these. Perhaps banks and investors have a surprise ahead.

I visualize a new form of banking. New investment companies as distinct from existing banks will not accept deposits (which are really an indebtedness payable before the stockholders can liquidate a penny), but will loan their share capital directly to small concerns and carefully watch them. Such companies could keep out of declining industries and gradually get into growing industries. The stock in these new investment companies should furnish investors excellent diversification and a good safe income. The main difficulty now with securities of small concerns is their very thin market. They are hard to sell in an emergency.

The importance of small concerns and the dangers of big concerns is not new. It has been discussed by philosophers and economists for the past 3,000 years. Only last night I was reading the first two chapters of Ecclesiastes—written 2,500 years ago. The writer was a captain of industry and the leading banker and investor of his time. He presents still another side of this whole question. Yes, I am bullish on properly-run small concerns in growing industries. The pendulum is about to swing in their favor.

Pegler Takes Up Some of the Campaign Chips and Shavings

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—If there is any royalty on ideas I must be running up quite a bill to the Democratic national committee, for this is the second time that I have been needled to rebuttal by the daily press release of that agency.

This one says that "a thorough housecleaning is needed now and again in a political campaign just to clear up a few odd bits and shavings which pass for genuine issues."

Pegler

I am thus reminded that it was Harold Ickes who officially took up the matter of Wendell Willkie's home address on Fifth avenue as a political issue, and that while he was standing there, his potty abdomen shaking in mischievous mirth, his half-brick bommeranged and knocked him for a spiral. The very mention of Willkie's home address naturally directed attention to Ickes' home address, which is two-fold, one being a country estate that really is an estate, a little outside Washington, the other an old family home in Winnetka, Ill., in a neighborhood so socially high-busted that the very street on which he lives is described as "Private road."

Ickes' reference to Willkie's home address plainly was intended to suggest that Willkie had a lot of money and to raise some question as to how he got it. He thus, unintentionally, conveyed a public invitation to himself, to tell how he got his money, but he hasn't pursued either fork of the subject, for the fact is that, unless he has some very positive information that Willkie stole the rent for his Fifth avenue apartment, then Willkie's method of acquiring money was at least as manly and as creditable by all the moral rule and social traditions by which Americans measure such things as Ickes' method.

Ickes didn't come out and say there was anything questionable about the Willkie method. He was dealing in some odd bits and shavings which, in the words of the Democratic national committee, were intended to pass for genuine issues. By the same token, the question how Ickes got his money is not a political issue, either, but it is just as pertinent as the question of how Willkie got his. He isn't tongue-tied and people will listen whenever he decides to tell how Harold Ickes struck it rich.

Now I see also, in the same press release of the Democratic national committee, an Enright cartoon showing Willkie heaving something at a wall-eyed hound labeled "utility record" and saying, "you quit following me around."

No Crime to Work in Utility Business

That makes me ask, just as a scandal-loving member of the general public, what the social-democrats have got on Willkie that is so sinister as to justify this cartoon and why they don't let us in on the secret so that we can judge whether the man was a crook or not? And if he wasn't a crook, what is the idea of this cartoon, anyway, especially from an outfit which decries insinuation and "odd bits of shavings" which "pass for genuine issues?" The mere fact that Willkie worked in the utility business, if he didn't do anything crooked, is nothing discreditable, and Willkie, far from concealing his employment in this line, has been campaigning as a believer in private industry and the employment of the American people in industries owned and operated by them, as opposed to the social-democratic or New Deal system, in which the government eventually becomes the only employer and an order from the boss is a military command, enforceable by military law and force.

These chips and shavings are not genuine issues, but the social-democrats insist on fighting that way, and their frequent mention of Willkie's downtown address always prompts the rejoinder that Franklin D. Roosevelt's address when he was a lawyer was just around the corner, and that right now the insurance firm of Roosevelt Sargent, which is the firm of Jimmy and his mother, is at 111 Broadway, in the same part of town, which is to say the Wall street section. Does that make crooks of the president and of Jimmy and his mother? If not, then how come it makes Willkie a crook?

I understand that this New Deal copy is turned out under the supervision of old Charlie Michelson, and I insist that the fact of his employment at $20,000 a year as a "public relations consultant" by a big radio corporation having important dealings with the communications commission while he was constantly hanging around the White House and sitting in on the president's press conferences in a confidential role is no mere chip or shaving. That should be an issue in the campaign, because no big corporation should be allowed to post its press agent in the White House as observer or adviser of the president in his conferences with the Daily press.

Wiley Wants Changes In Military Training

Washington —(AP)— The United States, declares Senator Wiley, must have a new approach to compulsory military training.

Advocating certain 1917-18 standards of discipline be discarded, the senator in a prepared statement said:

"Today even Hitler is discarding rigid Prussian army discipline. There is infinitely more reason for us to set an example of democratic methods in our selective service program. There must be no browbeating military caste system designed to make men into soulless fighting machines. We must have a higher type of discipline—a discipline of trust and cooperation—and common ideals."

Episcopal Church to Boost Funds to Carry On Missionary Work

Kansas City —(AP)— A three-year budget of $2,212,000—10 per cent higher than that of the past triennial—was proposed Friday at a joint session of the houses of bishops and deputies of the protestant Episcopal church convention.

Chief increase would be $117,000 to finance missionary work, particularly in India, now sponsored by the war-weakened mother church of England.

Episcipal women, in their traditional holy communion service, contributed $974,089.70 as a thank offering. The fund was $100,000 larger than at the 1937 convention.

The money will be devoted to construction of schools and hospitals and to foreign and domestic missions.

The proposal to aid British missions was in response to a plea from the Rt. Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, archbishop of Canterbury, and recommendations by presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker of Richmond, Va., head of the American church.

Delegates said the $117,000 would be swelled considerably by contributions by diocese throughout the nation.

Menasha Woman Raises Variety Of Gourds for Many Purposes

Menasha—Friends of Mrs. Wallace Schoepel, 736 Paris street, are glad that her hobby is raising gourds. They have attractive centerpieces for their dining room tables or buffets because of that hobby. Mrs. Schoepel raised about two bushels of gourds of various types this year from 10 plants.

Those plants included many different types, shapes and colors. Among the types she raised were egg plant, lemons, tomatoes, oranges, citron, apples, squash, pickles, pears, limes, watermelan and bananas. Only one type, which was supposed to result in a red and white colored gourd, refused to grow.

Most of the gourds have been treated with clear varnish by Mrs. Schoepel and arranged in dishes and bowls for centerpieces. Several arrangements were on display at Jefferson school and for the homemaking courses at Menasha High school while others have been used as shower gifts.

However, the gourds have other uses after a few minor alterations by Mrs. Schoepel. After the inside has been removed and the shell has dried and been varnished, the various shapes come in handy for ash trays, small flower pots, nut cups and one small orange one was turned into a jack-o-lantern and was used to hold cigarets and matches.

Beside use as center pieces, the gourds are made into a charm string woven together with red leather and used to hang in archways, on a sun porch and other places. Mrs. Schoepel has a large garden with a variety of blooms and indoors raises African violets. She has over 15 of the violet plants growing.

Winnebago County Board to Buy Airport

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau

Oshkosh — By a narrow margin of three votes, the Winnebago county board late yesterday afternoon voted to buy the present privately owned Oshkosh airport and 200 surrounding acres at a purchase price of $75,100. The vote was 23 to 20 in favor of the airport purchase.

With the exception of Henry Schultz, Neenah Fourth ward supervisor, the supervisors from the Twin Cities voted against buying the airport. Schultz is chairman of the county aviation committee. V. N. Landgraf, Menasha First ward supervisor, was not present at yesterday's county board session.

The vote was: Ayes — Cater, Clark, Cotter, Dreger, Drexler, Fisher, Gunz, Kannenberg, Kezertee, Kittleson, Kitz, Koch, Kornder, Kuettel, Macke, Novotony, Pfeiffer, Pingry, Raddatz, Radke, Rehbein, Schultz and Shea.

Those voting against the airport were Bartlett, Caswell, Crowley, Heckner, Howe, Howley, Hughes, Jackson, Kalfahs, Korotev, Meigher, Metzig, Neuschafer, Pope, Prebensen, Seithamer, Sonnenberg, Tank, Ulrich, and Werth.

The vote was taken after supervisors from Neenah and Menasha and a delegation of citizens from the Twin Cities entered pleas that the county consider "the heavy tax load that might result should the county purchase an airport."

Sonnenberg Against It

Supervisor E. G. Sonnenberg, Menasha Third ward, charged that the purchase price of $75,000 would be only the beginning and that the cost of administration in the county would rise steadily each year.

"Winnebago county has been praised for the business sense of its supervisors," he continued. "Let's hope that today we do not lose our business sense. We on the north end of the county would like to see the money applied against reducing the budget and taxes.

"We have no assurance that the federal government even wants to use this airport. What in heaven's name can we hope to get from commercial traffic?"

Supervisor Earl Hughes of the town of Neenah followed Sonnenberg in a denunciation of purchasing the airport, calling it a "white elephant that a certain group wanted to unload on the county."

"As for WPA funds for improvements, we may as well forget that when it comes to airports. Oshkosh is dead, and you know it. They are only walking around to save funeral expenses," Hughes declared.

Supervisor Robert M. Heckner, Menasha Fourth ward, asked that the county board consider economy and not injure the people by piling on higher taxes against every home and farm, adding that this was no time to experiment.

Congressman Frank B. Keefe told the county board yesterday morning that it might be possible to obtain money from improvements by securing a WPA grant as it was not likely the airport would be considered necessary for national defense.

Others Who Appeared

Other persons appearing before the county board to talk on the airport were Major S. E. Piasecki, manager of the Milwaukee county airport; Elmer Radtke, Neenah; Wilbur Sparks, Neenah; M. W. Schalk, Neenah; Lieutenant-Colonel Leslie Ross, Oshkosh; Mayor George Oaks, Oshkosh; and A. W. Scholl, Menasha, an engineer for the A. E. McMahon Engineering company who made a survey of the present airport and the proposed airport site north of the city of Oshkosh.

The site which the county board voted to purchase as a municipally owned airport is on the south city limits of Oshkosh. According to plans formulated by the aviation committee, the total site would be 297.7 acres and would be a Class 3 airport. The purchase price, as stated in options secured from present land owners, would total $75,000.58.

The present Oshkosh airport is only 100 acres and is owned by a private corporation. The remaining acreage will be purchased from surrounding farm lands. The location is a quarter mile west of Highway 45 and three-fourths of a mile east of Highway 44. It will be touched by Highway 26 on the south end and by the Soo Line railroad tracks on the east end. Sewer and water connections have been promised by the city of Oshkosh should this site be purchased.

The airport question decided, the county board voted to let all outstanding bills and other resolutions, including approval of the assessment evaluations drawn up by the equalization committee, be held over until the November session and adjourned until then.

Every Citizen Must Help Cut Taxes, Club Told

People Must Impress Need Upon Congress, Shattuck Contends

Menasha—The national debt can never be reduced appreciably nor can it be stopped from going higher, regardless of who goes in as president Nov. 5, unless the people of each community impress upon their congressmen that it must be reduced, that it must not be increased, was the contention of S. F. Shattuck, vice president of Kimberly-Clark corporation, in an address on "Our Duties as Citizens" Friday afternoon at the meeting of the Economics club of Menasha and Neenah at the Elisha D. Smith library.

Stating that he believed Mr. Roosevelt was sincere when he stated in 1932 that a family may live for a year on credit but that a continuous credit life eventually means the poor house, Mr. Shattuck said that the federal debt had gone out of control. Everyone has been taught to grab. Most people do not believe that the national debt matters because it belongs to us; that it is a purely political question. Such a prevailing attitude is more hazardous than the debt itself, he said.

The national debt as of June 30 was $43,200,000,000 and Wisconsin's share of that is $1,152,000,000. Menasha's share of that debt is $4,500,000 and Neenah's, $4,725,000. Every citizen above 19 years of age has a share of about $632.32.

Worked at Superior

Mr. Shattuck told the club members how the city of Superior was hit several years ago by a collapse of certain industries. Taxable incomes were reduced but the city went on spending at the previous level until they were issuing scrip to teachers and the situation was grave. A group of businessmen banded into an association and sat militantly at every council meeting, at every county board session, and forced budgets down so that the city of Superior's problem could be worked out. That is an awakened citizenry, the speaker implied.

Another danger spot in our democratic way of life is the indifference of the general citizenry toward problems which confront America as well as the apparent indifference of youth, Shattuck maintained.

"Some of us worked hard on the new citizenship program for the 21'ers," Mr. Shattuck said, "but we came up against indifference of the young people. It was found that the smaller the town or district, the more appreciative of citizenship were the young people but in a city like Neenah, only 25 per cent of the total 21'ers were interested. The program at Oshkosh was almost a complete washout. Of course I have wondered, as other workers wondered, whether, if such a program had been started when we were approaching twenty-one, we would have attended the meetings and been interested."

Religion Is Base

Mr. Shattuck stated that the basic principles of democracy, of our way of life, go back to the Christian religion; an evidence in the fact that all dictatorships have suppressed religion. The four principles underlying our democratic way of life are the strong shall stand with the weak, the solidarity of the family, the principle of the cross-sacrifice and, most basic and vital, the respect of individual human personality.

Mr. Shattuck spoke of the mutual working out of problems between the unions and Kimberly-Clark management and cited the present discussions between employes and employers at K-C in regard to laws of the company to govern draftees and militiamen who go for training. That mutual working out of problems is the democratic process, that is respect for the dignity of the individual. Mr. Shattuck also explained the week's orientation program for all new employes in order that each new worker may feel part of the industrial family.

Prior to Mr. Shattuck's talk, Mrs. Annette Sindahl Matheson and Mrs. Edwin Tyriver played "La Seguillida" by Bohm and "Stars and Stripes Forever" by Sousa.

Mrs. R. A. Haase, Mrs. G. W. Unser and Mrs. Iveaux Anderson were voted into membership of the club during the business session.

June Marie Montonati, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Montonati, 368 Oak street, Menasha, underwent a minor operation at St. Elizabeth hospital, Appleton, this morning.

Red Cross Roll Call Committee Will be Named

Board of Directors And Chairman Will Convene Next Week

Neenah—The board of directors of the Neenah chapter, American Red Cross, will meet with the chairman of the annual roll call, Harry M. Brown, next week to appoint the roll call committee, it was announced today.

Plans for the campaign for memberships will be formulated as soon as the committee is appointed. The roll call will get underway Nov. 11, Armistice day, and conclude Thanksgiving day.

Neenah's quota of memberships has been raised again this year. More than 1,200 members were secured last year and the minimum quota for this year is 1,400.

Because of national defense, more members and money will be needed this year. A large Red Cross program is underway with expansion of all service units, especially in the home service department which includes training of volunteer nurses and the blood plasma program.

Fifty cents of each $1 membership goes to national headquarters while the other 50 cents remains in the local chapter, but if a person contributes $5, only 50 cents goes to the national unit and the other $4.50 remains in Neenah.

Miss Hananh M. Lennon, representative from the midwestern branch, was in Neenah last week laying the groundwork for the drive.

Menasha Bartender Is Fined $200 and Costs In Municipal Court

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau

Oshkosh—Edward Pawlowski, 28, 282½ Tayco street, Menasha, was fined $200 and cost with an alternative of 60 days in the county jail when he pleaded guilty to selling liquor to a minor before Acting Municipal Judge D. F. McDonald yesterday afternoon.

Pawlowski, bartender at the Horseshoe tavern in Menasha, was arrested by Neenah police for selling a half-pint of liquor to an 18-year-old Neenah boy Wednesday. The lad pleaded guilty to drunken driving before Justice of the Peace Gaylord C. Loehning, following an arrest by Neenah police after the lad had gone on a "wild ride" which included crashing into a flasher signal standard and also into the front steps of a home, and an attempt to escape in a Neenah squad car.

Pawlowski was released to the custody of Chief of Police Irving Stilp of the Neenah police while he raises the money to pay the fine.

Board Sets Up $30,000 Fund for Food Stamp Plan

Money Will be Used If Federal System Is Given to County

(Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau)

Oshkosh—Assured that the federal food stamp plan will probably be recommended for county-wide operation here, the Winnebago county board yesterday unanimously appropriated $30,000 from the contingent fund to be used as a "food stamp revolving fund."

The money will be used to make the initial purchase of the federal food stamps and the funds will be handled by the county treasurer. The board passed another resolution stating that the administration cost of operating the food stamp plan would be borne as a public cost. The total annual cost estimated by food stamp officials for operating the plan would be about $5,540. This would supplement to some extent the cost of carrying on other forms of relief.

W. P. Oliver, senior program director for the Surplus Marketing administration of the federal department of agriculture, declared yesterday that he intends to recommend that the county be designated for operation of the food stamp plan.

It is estimated that operation of the food stamp plan will mean an additional $250,000 worth of business to wholesale and retail food dealers.

Mr. Oliver and G. H. Pettit a member of the regional office at Milwaukee, have been here all week, meeting with city officials, bankers, and food dealers, instructing them in the operation of the plan and making a survey as to the possibilities of Winnebago county being designated for operation of the plan. They concluded their work here yesterday.

As soon as official designation is received, it is expected that a staff of workers familiar with the procedure of the plan will come into the county to put it into operation. They will work with the newly formed Winnebago County Food council and the relief and welfare departments in the county.

K-C Men in Army Service Promised Help, Jobs Back

Neenah — The Kimberly-Clark corporation will give financial and other assistance as well as protect the jobs of its employes who are called in the National Guard and Reserve Officers mobilization and in the selective training and service draft, it was announced today by Charles G. Eubank, director of industrial relations.

This supplementary compensation covers voluntary as well as compulsory military service.

Eubank said that the corporation will pay the normal wages and salaries of employes for one month less than the base pay from the government for a month as well as give employes $50 after they have served 12 months training and are re-employed.

The director pointed out that there are 75 employes who are members of the national guard and reserve officers, and there are more than 2,000 men of draft age in the firm. Most of the guardsmen will be ordered to active duty Oct. 15 and the reserve officers will be called as needed.

Safeguard Rights

The corporation will do everything to "safeguard the rights and welfare of employes inducted into active service and the rights and welfare of their dependents with respect to corporation owned house leases and land contracts," according to Eubank.

The firm also has provided that if an employe has unused vacation due him when inducted into service, he will get the cash equivalent of the vacation period. The firm has a group insurance plan in which the company pays a portion of the premium and the employes the other part, but for those who are inducted into service, the company will pay both shares during the service

Going into the service also will not break employes' service records in regard to pensions or vacations

Eubank pointed out that all persons hired, transferred or promoted by the company to fill vacancies of men in service will be informed specifically that it is temporary and they will be subject to discharge, demotion or transfer. The purpose of this is to protect the jobs of the men in service.

Part of Policy

The director reported that this policy has become part of the collecting bargaining contract, and in forming the policy, the firm negotiated with three unions. They are the Wall Paper Workers Union of the Fox River Valley, George Ritten, president; Paper Mill Workers Union, Kimberly, Otto K. Hannemann, president, and Lakeview Independent Union, Dorward Schomisch, president.

The policy is retroactive to Sept. 16 and applies only to permanent employes, Eubank explained, and these supplementary benefits given are over and above the requirements of the law. Employes must also have completed three months service with the firm.

The firm also will go a step further than required by law in regard to reemployment after military service. "If the corporation's circumstances have so changed as to make restoration impossible or unreasonable, the corporation shall endeavor to provide reemployment to such an extent and upon such terms and conditions as are possible and reasonable."

Eubank said that the month salary is actually an extension of the benefit which has been given guardsmen who attend camp for two weeks each summer. He pointed out that the guards, draftees and reserve officers get a base pay as well as food and clothing from the government, but the company will still pay the difference between their salary or wages and the base pay, disregarding the food, clothing and shelter.

When the boys return to work after serving a year's military training, they undoubtedly will be in a financial depression. Eubank explained, so the firm will give them $50 when they start working again.

By Jimmie Fidler

Enroute Home — Dear Staff: A transcontinental air jaunt, at some 15,000 feet, gives one a nice vantage point from which to view America. Almost simultaneously, one sees great, congested cities and far-reaching, sparsely settled agricultural areas.

Fidler

Watching the swift change in density of population and industrial development as we speed West, I'm more than ever impressed by the fact that Americans, living in dissimilar sections of so enormous a country, are bound to have conflicting interests.

For example, you can't except a Chicago factory hand to see eye to eye with a Kansas wheat farmer on social reforms, economic problems and international politics Their environs — one indoors and the other out — have made them superficially unalike. And that is a fact Hollywood has been prone to forget—to its own cost.

No wonder "problem" pictures (films that propagandize for this or that) fall flat on the national market. No wonder such pictures, while doing big business in Eastern industrial centers, fail to arouse a ripple in the Corn Belt, and vice versa.

If Hollywood wants to please fans in EVERY section of America (which it must do or else take a severe licking now that remunerative foreign markets are lost), it must get back to fundamentals of good entertainment — to the BASIC EMOTIONAL VALUES. People everywhere, no matter how they earn their livings, enjoy love, laughter and excitement.

For the past year or so, the average movie producer has been yearning to wear a crusader's mantle. If he's not careful, it's apt to become a shroud.

JIMMIE FIDLER

Dear Boss: Since you brought up that crusader allusion yourself, it's only fair to warn our liege lord that some of his recent verbal blasts have irked certain puissant barons of Hollywood Not only do they wear crusaders' mantles; they also flourish lances — and yen to bury those trusty spears in the tender vitals of JMF.

Marjorie Rambeau is putting final touches on her autobiography (hot stuff, we hear) and 'twill be published, come spring . . . Constance Moore and hubby Johnny Mashio have scheduled a NY loll after completion of her current "I Wanted Wings" assignment . . . BOOK REVIEW

'The Brewers Big Horses' Merits Place on Shelf of Every Library

By Jean Wiley Thickens

"THE BREWERS BIG HORSES" by Mildred Walker.

After reading Mildred Walker's latest novel, "The Brewers Big Horses," one's first reaction is inevitably: "what a remarkable woman," for Sara does not seem to be merely a figment of the author's fertile imagination, but a very real person whom it might have been our privilege to know, had we lived in "Armitage City, Michigan in the 1880's.

Mildred Walker's name should be a familiar one to readers since her very successful "Dr. Norton's Wife" appeared not long ago. Miss Walker is a master of narrative style; her story flows smoothly and the frequent events which punctuate the book appear to happen with the inevitability of fate. The theme of the story can best be illustrated by paraphrasing two lines from Kipling: "For East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet." The prosperous families of Armitage City—a suburb of Detroit—who occupied the huge old frame houses on the west side of the railroad tracks never meet the families living on the east side of the tracks whom they scornfully designated as "foreigner." The families of the elect sent their sons to Harvard to be educated and to dissipate some of the vast fortunes they had amassed by denuding the mighty hardwood forests of Michigan for two generations. The sons of the foreigners—if they were given any higher education—attended the state university which was looked upon with scorn by the elite of Armitage.

Dares Family Tradition

The central figure of the story is Sara Bolster, youngest and most beautiful of the five Bolster sisters, whose family had been a social and financial leader of the community for half a century. Sara dared family tradition when at eighteen—after acquiring a semblance of education at Madame La Verne's Finishing School—she obtained a position as reporter on the "Daily Courant."

But when she fell in love and married young Dr. Henkel whose father owned and operated the local brewery, the Bolster clan felt besmirched in spite of the fact that Dr. Henkel was a surgeon who at 30 had already made a name for himself in his chosen profession.

The title of the story is taken from a line in one of Billy Sunday's rousing revivalist hymns and is peculiarly applicable to the events in the book. It is primarily the tale of Sara and the two fine young men who loved her so devotedly, and three more charming and admirable characters it would be difficult to find in fact or fiction. Sara is an individualist and in spite of family tradition, social ostracism and the pleadings of friends and family, she pursues all through her life the course which she deems right, for Sara was one "who is intolerant only of knaves and intolerance." The entire plot has a most convincing ring, while the word pictures of a prosperous mid-western city in the eighties and nineties and up till national prohibition changes the course of Sara's life, are exceptionally well done. "The Brewers Big Horses" is a novel you will want to have in your own library to reread at intervals.

Wife Can Baby Husband Without Spoiling Him

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix—Speaking of a woman babying and petting her husband, did the idea ever occur to you that the woman who has raised a large family would like to get out of the nursery at last and not have to coddle a fullgrown infant the rest of her natural life? Let me tell you that a husband can be a more exacting baby than a nursing infant, and the woman who begins the petting and babying act on the honeymoon finds herself in for a life of constant attendance upon the spoiled child who rates himself a man before the world. Unfortunate, indeed, is the woman who is the victim of a tyrannical, selfish and fault-finding man whom no wife can please, no matter what she does. Her only choice is doing what she knows is right and letting it go at that, for there will be ructions anyway. I have tried it and I know. A WIFE.

Dorothy Dix

Answer:

Isn't it a pity that spoiled husbands can't be treated still further like spoiled children and turned across somebody's knee and spanked until they are made to behave themselves? I have seen a fretful, whining child, slapping at everything that was offered it, crying for the moon, restored to normalcy and turned into a sweet, smiling cherub by a few vigorous applications of a hairbrush wielded by a philanthropic reformer.

And I have often thought how efficacious just such a treatment would be on a lot of disgruntled, fault-finding husbands and wives I know who make life miserable for the unfortunate women and men who are married to them, and who spend their lives vainly trying to please them.

Don't Have to Spoil Him

But you can pet a man, dear lady, without spoiling him. You can be affectionate to him and tell him how much you admire him, and how good looking you think he is and how you appreciate all his good qualities and all that he does for you.

You can let him see that he is still a lover and a gallant knight in your eyes instead of just expecting him to take it for granted that you still care for him because you haven't gone to Reno, without enslaving yourself to him. You can make a fuss over your husband without blacking his boots, or being perpetually at his beck and call.

I think that a woman is foolish to give up all of her own individuality and sacrifice all of her own pleasures in life to either her husband or her children, and that they both respect and love her more when she doesn't.

In a way every woman does have to mother her husband just as she does her children, and she has to bring them up pretty much on the same plan. The way they turn out depends on how she raises them.

Easy to Avoid

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young man and have been keeping company with a typical flapper for three years. I love this girl dearly, but she has an entirely different point of view from myself about life. She knows that I am saving money to go into business for myself, but she is always asking me to lend her money to buy clothes. She never returns the money. She is very extravagant, and when I refuse to give her money, she calls me a tightwad and refuses to speak to me. Do you think she really loves me? Do you think that if I marry her, we will be happy and have a peaceful home?

GEORGE R.

Answer:

You certainly are unlucky, son, to have set your heart on a girl such as you describe, for she has no single qualification for making a good wife, and if you marry her you are doomed to misery and disappointment.

Evidently you are industrious and ambitious and want to get on in the world, and if you marry an extravagant woman, you will be perfectly miserable because she will thwart you at every turn.

You will never be able to save a penny and you will find yourself sold into slavery to milliners and dressmakers and beauty parlors, and at the end of the year you will have nothing to show for your labor but a pile of receipted bills.

But the chances are that your guardian angel will save you, and that this girl will leave you for some man who is easier to work. She is just a gold-digger and the only thing about any man that she is capable of loving is his pocketbook.

Weekly Allowance

Dear Miss Dix—We are two sisters, both married. Our father and mother have been living thus far by themselves in a small house which they rent. Father has lost his position, and as they have only a small income, they wish to break up housekeeping and come and live with us. Unfortunately, our parents are very fault-finding and nagging and hard to get along with, and we realize that to take them into our homes will be disastrous, as we had a taste of living with them for a short time after we were married, and the results were terrible. Our husbands are good men and willing to do the right thing. But what is the RIGHT thing under the circumstances? MARY AND SUE.

Answer:

The right thing will be for you both to give your parents a monthly allowance that will enable them to live simply but comfortably, and remain in their own home.

This would be best for them and best for you. It would be best for them because it would give them their freedom and furnish them an occupation. One of the reasons why old people are so difficult to live with is because of their perpetual interference and criticisms, and this is the result of their having nothing to do and no interests of their own.

Mother and Father, after having been busy for a lifetime, break up their home and go to live with their children. Their hands are idle, their minds unoccupied. They have no plans of their own, and so they sit around and find fault and advise and suggest until they run everybody mad. And they are miserable themselves because they are bored.

That is why old people should be kept in their own homes and permitted to live their own lives as long as possible. That way happiness lies for all.

SNAGGED STOCKINGS

Imagine what a problem it would be for a hostess if she had to buy stockings for every guest who got a run in a pair while in her house! Such a situation would be similar to that described in the following letter!

"In getting out of the car of a friend, with whom I went out the other evening, I snagged my stocking on the edge of the door, and of course ruined it! In my annoyance at the time, I stupidly exclaimed, 'There goes my new stockings!' He feels that he should buy me a new pair, whereas I think that an accident like this was unavoidable so far as he was concerned, and I should not accept stockings from him. Of course I can't afford to wear a pair just one time, which was what happened in this case, but I can perfectly manage without these."

The tearing of her stockings on his car is not his responsibility, and she is quite right in refusing to agree that stockings should be accepted under these circumstances. Whether she accepts stockings at Christmas, or for her birthday, or for a "no day" gift, is something that depends upon her and him, and many things outside of this one question.

The Wedding Announcement

The printer has suggested that it would be all right to have my fiance's name included with his title "Dr." on our wedding announcements. The reason he gives for saying this is that it is entirely correct that my parents should call him Doctor, even though a Ph. D. is not supposed to use this title socially himself. But we'd like to have your opinion.

Answer: Although as you say, the announcements are not being sent out by himself, nevertheless they are so obviously sent with his approval that I think using his title on this particular occasion could not be considered in best taste.

What Can Be Served?

Dear Mrs. Post: When a few people come to call formally, please tell me what can be served which would be proper and yet not overdone.

Answer: If they come between the hour of four and five-thirty, serve tea, of course—iced tea in summer and hot tea in winter. On the other hand, if afternoon tea is not an everyday custom in your house, the proper service of tea may seem a good deal of a fuss. If this is the case, you might offer tomato juice or glasses of sherry. With either of these, a few crackers is all that is necessary. Or for that matter, it is not necessary to offer people anything—particularly if it is not your practise to serve cocktails or other stronger beverages.

Chance to Make Up Test Points

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Referring to the national bridge examination which has been running for two weeks in this column, I had better say a word about the demerit points I have been assigning to various answers. Many readers may not be feeling that their 1,000 points won't last very long if they have to take off 40 or 50 points at a clip. May I remind them of two facts: (a) the exam will be shorter than the last one (only about 40 questions as against 57, hence there will be less opportunity to pile up demerits. And (b) questions will soon make their appearance bearing credit points rather than demerits. If these are answered correctly depleted scores can bloom with new life. At any rate don't get discouraged this early in the game!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Pass
3 spades	Double [final bid]

West passed on the first round as a trapping measure, but when South bid three spades, felt that North could not have the strength for another raise, hence stepped in with a penally double. He should have waited or should have chosen his opening lead with more imagination. He led the club king, then the ace and ten spot. This established South's clubs and made it impossible to defeat the contract. South, on taking the third club, led a low spade. West had to hop up with an honor and could make no better return than a diamond. Declarer got rid of his queen and ten of hearts, conceded another trick to West's second spade honor, then claimed the balance.

The lead of the king from a holding of A-K-x has long been a favorite of the bridge public (and of some authorities) but actually it should be used rather sparingly. This is particularly true when the "x" is a ten or nine. Only when the partner of the leader has the queen, or a doubleton which will permit a third round ruff, has the lead any advantage. Under almost all other circumstances it is apt to cost a trick. In this hand, which is typical, either a diamond or a heart lead would have defeated the contract. (The first named lead would, of course, have been more logical.) Declarer could always get the discards on the ace and king of diamonds (or, failing that, force a favorable lead from West) but would have to lose two trump tricks and three clubs.

Although I dislike generalities, I might say that when leading from a strong hand such as West's, the best course is to choose the suit containing the least strength.

My Neighbor Says—

Yellow crocuses are the brightest of the early Spring bulbs. Plant a good patch of them.

If you have time spade the vegetable garden this Fall.

If the roof should leak and stain your ceiling, cover the stain with block magnesia. Rub the block over the spot until the stain is covered, then smooth over with the tips of your fingers. It works like majic.

Let potatoes that are to be French fried stand in cold water at least half an hour before frying. It makes them crisp.

To clean the inside of milk bottles add a tablespoon of salt to one-third cup of vinegar, put into bottle and shake well.

Beauty and You
By Patricia Lindsay

EVENING HAT—The coiffure evening hat created jointly by Josef of Helena Rubinstein and Eve Tartar, designer. One's hair is drawn through slits of the material forming an attractive sculptured frieze.

Coiffures, like hat fashions, have their cycles. For years you recall, the sleek mannish bob held its sway. Then suddenly waves and ringlets appeared on every every feminine head to be followed by the upswept fashion which almost banished hats from a woman's wardrobe! Currently the long bob and pompadour is being favored but if we heed the predictions of our more advanced hair stylist we are in for a new sleekness of hair styling——not a mannish sleekness but a very feminine, sculptured, classic sleekness.

Josef, hair stylist of a fashionable beauty salon, is first to sponsor what he calls the draped-coiffure. It is a classic revival of hair-do inspired by Greek and Roman sculpture with the accent on simplicity of line instead of decoration. If you know your ancient art you will recall that Greek heads were sharply outlined, the hair plastered closely in flat swirls or soignee short flat half-curls.

This new draped coiffure, we are told, is in harmony with a current trend for greater simplicity in fashion. No bangs, no fluff, no fat curls to destroy the symmetry of a beautiful feminine head. Or no waves piled high with clustered, distracting ringlets.

The hair is treated in the same manner as Alix treats fabrics—it is draped to the contour of one's head. Drawn back smoothly from the face with soft folded curls on the sides and a drapery effect cascading down the back. A coiffure which is equally flattering for day or evening, to young or mature, and easily managed.

It Is Dramatic

I must confess the effect of this new coiffure is dramatic after seeing all the frizzed arrangements of the past few years. One youthful American milliner, Eve Tartar, has condoned the new fashion by creating a version of skullcap which hugs the head closely and boasts of piped slits which permits the flat half-curls to be pulled through the hat material and thus becoming part of the hat design. A veil of contrasting color (possibly accenting one's lipstick shade) is worn low in back thus dramatizing more the importance of the sleek hair-do. If the hat material colors are your best colors the chances are you will look as beguiling as a Greek Goddess, with all attention riveted on your beautiful open face and nicely poised head!

Watch Drapery Trend

You who dislike the pompadour or long-bob may well experiment with the new plastique effect for Dame Fashion is predicting that we are in for a siege of draped gowns for both daytime and evening—little ornamentation, exquisite lines, rich materials, very feminine in appearance. If this is true our coiffures will follow the lead for who can imagine a beautiful woman artistically draped in lush fabric to reveal pleasing curves with her hair touching her shoulder in an untidy, unbecoming deb-bob or her head dressed in a fluffy, frizzy pompadour making it look twice its actual size?

Oh hum — this fashion business keeps us bustling, but isn't it fun?

Miss Lindsay's leaflet on "Breathing Exercises" tells you how to beautify your bustline. If you request it write her in care of the Post-Crescent and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope to cover mailing cost.

Case Records of a Psychologist
By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

There are times when everybody tends to feel blue and desirous of engaging in self-pity. Such moodiness is usually due to inactivity and the need for a good laxative. But to offset the psychological effect of such self-pity, just think of the great men and women of the past and present who succeeded in spite of blindness and deafness, racial ostracism and poverty. Think of the luxuries which even our poorest Americans enjoy in contrast to people in China or European concentration camps. The law of relativity holds here.

CASE R-196: Faith J., aged 19, is one of my college students.

"In your lecture last week you talked about changing stumbling blocks into stepping stones," she smilingly reminded me.

"Well, I come from the South and can cite you an excellent example in point.

"In one of our southern states is a monument erected in honor of the boll weevil! That may sound strange since you know that the boll weevil has caused our plantation owners the loss of millions of dollars.

"But the people who erected the monument are paying tribute to the influence of the boll weevil in forcing them to diversify their crops.

"In the old days they relied almost wholly on cotton, so the ravages of the boll weevil could ruin much of their entire season's work. Now, even though the cotton doesn't come up to expectations, they have other valuable crops."

DIAGNOSIS:

Faith's interesting observation simply illustrates the old adage to the effect that it is an ill wind that blows nobody good.

It also shows that our greatest misfortunes may ultimately turn out to be blessings in disguise. Stumbling blocks can either check a man's onward progress or be converted into stepping stones to even greater attainment.

The Hall of Fame is studded with names of great people who started out in life under some physical or social handicap. You well remember shy, stuttering Moses and his twin among the Greeks who was Demosthenes, the inspiration of every public speaker who suffers stage fright.

Your Future Lies In You

Epileptic Caesar, deaf Beethoven, blind Milton, the little shrimp called Napoleon, club-footed Lord Byron who not only compensated by becoming the greatest swimmer of his day but also an immortal poet, tubercular Robert Louis Stevenson, paralyzed Annette Kellerman and Franklin D. Roosevelt, deaf Edison, hunchbacked Steinmetz, burned and apparently permanently crippled Glenn Cunningham, world record holder in the mile run—these are only a scattered few of the handicapped who converted their stumbling blocks into stepping stones.

Hundreds of young people write to me bemoaning their crossed eyes, big ears, large noses, or freckles and birth marks.

Nevertheless, many famous movie stars have actually used those same physical traits as assets. Remember Ben Turpin's crossed eyes? Or Martha Raye's and Joe E. Brown's big mouths? How about Jimmy Durante's nose?

Or Wallace Beery's face? Or Mickey Rooney's freckles? Or W. C. Fields?

Storms Make Sturdy Oaks

The tough going in childhood makes you more sturdy if you but realize that success lies in yourself, not the environment. The wind swept oaks grow the deepest roots and become the better equipped, therefore, to withstand future storm and drought.

If you have any physical cause for embarrassment, reduce it as much as possible by dieting or surgical aid. Then be philosophical and develop a clever comeback to meet future kidding.

Remember the fat girl who met such kidding by the smiling retort that "Fat people cast more shade in summer and more heat in winter;"

Family Traditions Guide Behavior in Later Life

BY ANGELO PATRI

After the children are grown up, it is too late to begin teaching them family loyalties, family religion, politics and traditions. They must take these in with their milk or they will take them lightly over afterward. When parents ask what they are to do, when their children announce that they are going to marry one of another race, creed or tradition all that can be said is: "Say what is in your heart and then make the best of what happens." There is no way of compelling young people to marry according to your choice.

Nor should there be. Marriage is the most personal matter that can touch a human being. Here he should be free if he is ever to be free. The choice is momentous. If it is a wrong one it is a life-lasting wrong. No process of law, no wilful act, can eliminate a marriage once it has been consummated. It is a fact set in the adamant records of time and human destiny. If it is the right choice, it means the best that life affords in human relationships is to come of it. One can ask no more.

Small wonder then that fathers and mothers look with anxious concern on the mates their children choose. But they can do little about it and should not try to do anything either way. It is always best for people to marry within their own tradition. There are fewer hazards to be met. The families agree on fundamentals and so are able to get along together, while differing as all people must do, on the unessential. Boys and girls ought to consider this when they look toward marriage with one of another faith, race, or tradition.

It is idle to say: "I am marrying him-her—not the family." You marry the family, root and branch when you marry any member of it. Blood is a stream of life, not a thing, that can be lifted and set aside. It courses through the lives of people as well as through the veins of individuals. Then be careful of what you are doing when you cross the strains.

Family Support

Everybody needs his family behind him. That is not apparent to the young people until one day they discover a great need. They need a word from father, a talk with mother, help from aunt or uncle, sympathy from the group. It is on these relations that life depends for strength and support both spiritual and physical. Young people need their families as much as their families ever needed them. Warring families weaken marriages.

Mixed marriages have succeeded. When this is so, the young people did not have strong convictions about fundamental things like religion, race and tradition. One or the other, or both, were quite willing to let the old ideas go by the board. They were both strong enough to overcome any family opposition or perhaps the family opposition was not strong. If it had been, maybe the young people would have had those strong convictions that make the opposition powerful enough to cause family troubles.

However one point comes clear. The surest way is the old way of like to like.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Memory of the Moon
By Jeanne Bowman

YESTERDAY: Taylor refuses to say why he thinks the ranch is worth $50,000. Constance seeks out Taylor's son and discovers that he is Pedro. He knew her identity all along.

Chapter Eight

Shrewd Irishman

During their ride back only once did a strain appear.

"What were those queer-looking cattle?" Constance asked, and pointed back to the sleek cows with black heads and haunches, a white band going evenly about their middle.

"Dutch belted," answered Peter.

"What is their selling point?" pursued Constance.

"Selling point?" echoed the puzzled cattleman. "Oh, you mean their merit? They're to the Dutch what the Holsteins are to the Danes; quantity milk-producers."

And then he checked himself, looked quickly at Constance and quickly away, and she pursued the subject no longer but tucked it into her memory for further consideration.

Sunlight filtered through the willows, casting a dappled shade in the patio. The table between them, Constance and Pedro, for so he would always be to her, faced each other.

Constance looked at him and found the romantic vaquero had disappeared and a shrewd black Irishman had taken his place. She was no longer a pretty girl to him, but an opponent.

Constance, had she known it, held the advantage. Hair ruffled by the wind, grotesque overalls and outsized shirt, she looked like a guileless tomboy. To one who had never studied the portraits of the late Michael Mahoney, there was nothing in the blackfringed blue eyes to warn them to beware.

"You said you couldn't explain your desire to own El Cabrillo," Constance began. "Why?"

"How explain love to one who has never loved?" countered Taylor.

"Assuming I don't love this land," deducted Constance.

"We don't neglect what we truly love," retorted her opponent.

"You Taylors are in charge of the land. If there is neglect, why lay it at the feet of the Cabrillos?"

"Admitting father has been managing the ranch for sixteen years, have you, anyone of you, since the death of your father, ever tried to understand how handicapped we are?

"Has any Cabrillo asked of the land? Have they ever taken any interest in anything excepting how to get more money out of it? Have they ever suggested one penny be put back into the land or into the stock?

"No land, business, or individual can grow without replenishing.

"You wouldn't understand the necessity of crossing strains to improve the stock. And you wouldn't understand the necessity of improving stock to meet changing market conditions.

"When father, five years ago, paid a thousand dollars for Red River Dan, a bull, your eastern agent accused him of experimenting at the cost of El Cabrillo and refused to allow the deduction. Father paid for him out of his own pocket because he knew it was necessary.

"He's done these things many times to keep life flowing through these acres and through the herds. He's fought for this place as though it were his own. And it has been a losing fight."

"Then why does he want to buy it?" demanded Constance.

"Men who know father's ability are willing to loan him money to put El Cabrillo on a good paying basis. They can't do that, and he can't ask them to, while the land remains in your hands.

"We don't know when you people may suddenly decide to sell to someone else. And you can't mortgage this place as long as it remains in your hands, because it is homesteaded. You can't even sell off a portion to raise money because you are bound by the stipulations in your father's will. So there you are."

'Cleverly Evasive'

Peter Taylor concluded, lighted a cigaret, and above the match twin flames were set in his dark eyes as they watched Constance; twin flames of derision.

"Satisfied?" he asked when she didn't speak.

"No," she answered promptly. To the Taylor she had expected to meet out here, she could have asked the source of the fifty thousand he intended to use for the purchase of El Cabrillo; the source of the money they had already expended on the place. She couldn't ask that of this man anymore than she could have allowed anyone to ask such a question of herself.

She dug into her jeans for her cigaret case and Pedro was quick with a light for her. His hand touched hers and she started, started and met his eyes only to look quickly away. Resolutely she steeled herself against the fascination this man held for her, and when she looked at him again, the blue of her eyes were mere slits between the shelter of lashes.

"You've given me logical reasons for wanting ownership," she conceded, "but you're withholding something vitally important, just as you withheld your reason for knowing a Cabrillo was due at the ranch.

"You knew someone was coming and prepared for it. My reception was beautifully staged. I appreciate that. It gave me a taste of what my Cabrillo forefathers had. But those costumes had been well aired, not a scent of mothballs lingered in them nor in the draperies or bedding in my room.

"You have been cleverly evasive. You are a shrewd man, Peter Taylor."

Taylor's head went back and laugh rang out. "You're pretty shrewd yourself, child."

"You admit the ranch could be put on a good paying basis," she went on. "How much would it take?"

"Have you some money to invest?" Taylor asked, lightly.

"The 'Charge it' Cabrillos, with money?" echoed Constance. "No, but I might raise some."

Taylor stood up, and now there was vague pity in his eyes. "It would take too much, Mishael," he said, using the name so easily he wasn't aware of it; using it so easily she was stung to a belief that he called her that secretly, as she called him Pedro.

"Look at the time," he said abruptly, "Meg will be in our hair. We dine at midday on the ranch and you're dining with us.

"As for raising money ... my father couldn't do it without owning the land. You can't without the right to use the land as security. And so, that is that."

"That," corrected Constance, laughing up at him, "is what you think."

She went into her room for comb and powder before accompanying him, and the adoring Dolores followed her.

Constance touched the chrysanthemums in their pottery bowls and smiled across their bronze heads to the maid. "It was lovely of you to give me this nice welcome. How did you arrange everything so quickly?"

"Eeet was not queeck, senorita. Two nights ago the Senor Pedro, he come to us and say — 'everytheeng must be thus and so, the Senorita Conchita Cabrillo flies west to visit. Give to her the welcome you would give a Cabrillo.'"

Constance patted Dolores and went out to join Taylor who was puzzled at her sudden listlessness.

Two nights ago, Constance was thinking. She had barely known herself that she was flying west.

Telegram

Meg was waiting for them. Again Constance tucked her arm into the curve of the older woman's and delighted her with a running fire of talk about the morning ride, until they reached Meg's room where Constance would change back to her street clothes.

She turned then. "Meg," she began earnestly, "I'm going to put my cards on the table. I need to know something and no one will help me. I think you will, but first I want you to swear you will never tell anyone, especially the Taylors, one word of what I am going to say. Swear?"

Solemnly Meg Donahue crossed herself and raised her hand. "Out with it, pet," she urged, softly. "It was in your eyes as you came up the hill, and a heavy cross for one so young."

Swiftly Constance told of her queer love for El Cabrillo, her inability to visit the rancho because she hadn't the money; the desire of her family to sell and her sudden decision to fly out and see if she could part with it.

"And I'll be honest with you, Meg," she assured her, "I wanted to learn why the Taylors wanted to buy; why they were offering that certain amount, and to see if they were being honest with us.

"Now Meg, there were only two people who knew I was coming, my employer and his secre—"

The Home Gardener
by Edwin H. Perkins

Where winters are mild, gardeners will find this an excellent time for setting out overblooming roses. Plants started now will be in ideal condition for blooming at an early date next year. Long before the ground gets in condition to work in the spring, these fall-planted bushes will be sending up their sap from roots which began to work in late winter.

For best results it is advisable to plant these roses in well prepared soil. Roses need deeply dug, generously enriched soil loam for their finest blooms. The enrichment may be made with rotted cow manure or the equally good bi-product of livery stables. Any slow acting chemical fertilizer is good. Bone and horn shavings are also widely used.

It is not necessary to dig rose beds to a depth of several feet as is so frequently advocated. While it is true that roses may benefit from such deep tillage, it is wasted effort, especially if the soil around the plants is frequently tilled and pepped up with quick acting chemicals.

Exceptions to the roses which require such rich foods are the wildlings and those dwarfs which are generally associated with the rock garden. These types frequently overgrow when provided with an overrich diet.

SATURDAY TALK:

On the twelfth of October each year, we celebrate Columbus Day. In doing so, we honor the great sea captain who tried to reach India, but instead found a New World.

Almost four and a half centuries have passed since Columbus made his first journey across the ocean Certainly he was brave to dare to cross the Sea of Darkness, as the Atlantic was called in 1492

Think what changes have taken place in transport since that year! Columbus sailed in slow-moving sailing vessels. There were 48 sailing days in going from Spain to the Bahama islands, not counting the delay in the Canary islands. The average distance covered in a sailing day of 24 hours was 90 miles The "speed" was about 4 miles per hour These figures are based on a straight-line journey. Changing winds made the course of Columbus somewhat zigzag

Today there are ocean liners which could make the same trip in four or five days A large steamer like the "Queen Mary" can travel 750 miles in a 24-hour day.

We may take the speed of a large liner as from 30 to 35 miles per hour. That is fast when compared to the sailing of Columbus, but it is slow compared to what an airplane can do

Yankee Clippers have crossed the Atlantic in 24 hours or less In one trip, 22 passengers were taken from Long Island to Portugal in 23 hours and 52 minutes of flying time.

A flight from Newfoundland to the British Isles is not so long as from Long Island to Portugal Eight years ago, Amelia Earhart Putnam flew from Newfoundland to Ireland in 14 hours and 56 minutes. Her average speed was 126 miles per hour.

Today we hear of planes which travel 400 miles an hour, or even more. It is well to keep in mind that such speed can be kept up only for a short time No one ever has made an Atlantic crossing at 400 miles an hour.

As time goes on, however, it is quite likely that the average speed across the ocean will be at least 400 miles In fact, it may be much more than that You and I may live to take a trip across the Atlantic in four or five hours.

LAST NIGHT'S SCORES
Menasha 19, Clintonville 0.
Kaukauna 27, Shawano 0.

BY BILL DOWLING

Kaukauna—A homecoming crowd of 4,000 saw Kaukauna High school gridders at their best last night. This means a remarkable performance by a squad that has captured 18 straight games, and such a performance it was, the Kaws practically chasing the Shawano Indians back to the reservation with a 27 to 0 triumph.

Karl Giordana played the greatest game of his career. He scored two touchdowns, one on a run of 51 yards. He threw two passes which resulted in the other two scores, all in all, connecting on 10 of 14 aerials. In between he smashed through the Indian line and played a bang-up game on defense.

Alger Grabs Passes

Next to Giordana ranked the other co-captain, Bill Alger. Alger time and again appeared from nowhere to stretch up his 6-feet 3-inches and snare Giordana's heaves. He grabbed one on the Indian 25 and sped to a touchdown.

Handicapped more by the hard charging Kaukauna linemen than by the feebleness of his own forward wall, Shawano's Billy Reed was well bottled up most of the way. Early in the third quarter, with his team trailing 20 to 0, Reed suffered a neck injury when being tossed for a 5-yard loss and was helped off the field. Later he was taken to St. Elizabeth's hospital for examination.

The Indian star's best effort was a 28-yard jaunt at the beginning of the second half, feinting Giordana out of position but being brought down by Willis Ranquette just when it looked like he was away.

The Kaukauna linemen, led by Ray Hurst at tackle and John Velte at center, came through with their best blocking of the season. On Giordana's 51-yard touchdown run, all the enemy players were down before he really got under way.

Line Rushes Reed

The Kaukauna line gave Reed little chance to aim his passes accurately. The visitors' best offensive measures were short man plays sending Berton and Culver into the line. In the second quarter these measures, plus a 20-yard gain when interference on a pass was allowed, let the Indians reach the Kaw 6, where Giordana nailed Reed a yard short of a first down.

The game's beginning was rather discouraging to Shawano. Kaukauna got the ball twice and made two touchdowns.

After receiving the kickoff, Reed got off a quick kick on second down, the ball rolling to Kaukauna's 2-yard line, where Giordana grabbed it and scampered back to the 22. After smashing through for 9 more Karl passed to Ranquette on the 48. Two running plays got nowheres, whereupon Giordana tossed one to Alger, who snared it on the Indian 30 and continued for 10 more. A fumble lost 5 yards, but Giordana's pass to Rohan on the goal line was good. Rohan took the ball away from two defenders for the touchdown. Giordana passed to Alger for the extra point.

Giordana Rambles

Shawano received again, could do nothing, kicked and the Kaws were on their way to another score. Giordana returned Reed's punt 21 yards to the enemy 46. Set back 5 yards for offside, Giordana then coursed around right end for 51 yards and another six points, running the last 25 yards by himself. His placekick was perfect.

Taking Kaukauna's kickoff on the 20 the Indians drove to the Kaw 6 before being stopped. Plunges by Reed, Culver and Berton, a 15-yard penalty on the Kaws for unnecessary roughness and an interference ruling enabled the visitors to reach Kaukauna's 15. A short pass over center to Anderson gained to the 10. Two more passes failed, and on last down Reed swept around end only to be brought up on the 6, a yard short of a first down, by Giordana.

The Indians had another opportunity when Giordana got off a bad kick which sailed out of bounds on the Kaukauna 28. Reed slashed to the 19 and Culver reached the 10. Here the attack stalled and on last down Reed's attempted field goal was wide.

Alger Scores on Pass

Taking the ball on the 20, in five plays the Kaws had their third touchdown. Giordana went around end to the 42 and then picked up 3 more. On a reverse Ranquette dashed to the enemy 37, from where Giordana added another 3. Alger then crossed over, snatched Giordana's pass on the 25 and ran for six points. The placekick was low.

The Kaws penetrated to the Indian 18 at the start of the second half before an intercepted pass halted the drive. Reed ran to the Kaukauna 46, his best effort of the game. Reed was then injured while being tossed for a 5-yard loss and had to leave the game.

A few monutes later the Kaws were on their way to the last touchdown, after Alger recovered James' fumble on the Kaw 26. Giordana went 10 yards. Danner galloped through the line and lateraled to Ranquette, who reached the Shawano 32. A holding penalty stopped the march momentarily, but Giordana passed to Rohan on the 26. Gioradan smashed off 23 yards, then three more for the score, on the first play of the last quarter.

Dilts Draws Penalty

Giordana's placekick made it 27 to 0. The Indians took the kickoff on their 18 and reached their 44 before Coach Clifford Dilts personally set them back 15 yards. Dilts didn't leave the field when asked to do so by Referee Veren Llewellen.

Anderson grabbed a long pass on the Kaw 43 and James made four off tackle. Alger then broke through to smear James for a 9-yard loss and the Indians finally kicked. Kaukauna threatened twice in the closing minutes. Giordana returned a punt 63 yards to the Indian 18, but a holding penalty squelched the chance. Later Giordana returned another punt from midfield to the 20. Frank Giordana caught a pass to the 15, but Kaukauna was penalized for two many time outs. On the last play of the game Femal passed to Rieth to the 10.

BILLY'S ALL RIGHT — Last night's Shawano-Kaukauna game was marred when Billy Reed, Shawano's star back, suffered an injury and was taken from the game and then carried from the field on a stretcher and rushed to the hospital. Shortly thereafter reports started circulating regarding his injury and this morning the Post-Crescent telephone rang almost continuously as fans made inquiries. Bill suffered bruised neck muscles and had a stiff neck this morning but otherwise felt all right. He suffered a severe shock when injured and his condition looked unfavorable when taken from the game. As a precaution he was taken to the hospital but had rallied on arrival. He spent a good night and was expected to return to Shawano today. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

Bluejays Cop First League Grid Victory

Beat Clintonville Truckers by 19-0 On Menasha Grid

BY RANDY HAASE

Menasha—Menasha High school gridders rolled over Clintonville 19 to 0 for their first Northeastern Wisconsin conference victory of the season Friday night. The defeat was the fourth straight for Clintonville but was the first time that the Truckers were held scoreless this season, even though Menasha second and third stringers played a large part of the game.

The Bluejays took control of the game immediately although they did not score until the second quarter. Clintonville received and Roloff got off one of those towering punts that kept Menasha back through the first half until he was injured on a vicious tackle by Michalkiewicz.

In the first quarter the Jays drove from their 35 to the Clintonville 31 on two first downs with Baldauf and Nantke doing most of the running. There the attack bogged down and Clintonville took the ball on their 27. The Truckers got a first down on a Menasha penalty before Robinson intercepted a Trucker pass. The Jays failed to get going and Robinson punted into the end zone from midfield. Clintonville punted back to the Menasha 40 and the first touchdown march started.

O'Brien Runs Well

Wideman made two, Nantke picked up five, and O'Brien went seven for a first down. O'Brien did his best running of the season last night with the assistance of some powerful blocking from the other Bluejay players. O'Brien, Nantke and Wideman carried the ball and it was first down on the Trucker 34 as the first quarter ended.

Two plays gained a yard and then O'Brien broke away for a 17-yard sprint, putting the ball on the Trucker 16. O'Brien made three, and Nantke gained a first on the Trucker five in two plays. The Clintonville line yielded grudgingly and O'Brien, Nantke and Wideman made only four yards in three tries. On fourth down Robinson scored a quarterback sneak and O'Brien booted the extra point.

The Jays counted their next touchdown in short order. O'Brien booted the kickoff to the 5 and Milford Bodah returned to the Trucker 25 where he fumbled when hit hard. Wideman recovered on the 29. O'Brien gained 15 on the first thrust through the line. Nantke powered through the Clintonville line on the next play and picked his way past the backs for the marker.

Late in the quarter Clintonville put together three first downs for a 40-yard march but Menasha took the ball before the half ended. Jim Breed pitched three passes right down the middle to Jim Werner for most of the yards. Menasha reserves were playing at the time.

Ball in Truck Territory

The Jays struck quickly in the third quarter for their last marker. Clintonville failed to gain and William Thompson, Menasha end, rushed in and dropped Roloff for a 13 yard loss when he went back to punt on fourth down on the Trucker 33. O'Brien swung to the right for 31 yards to the two and went over on the next play. Menasha kept the ball in Trucker territory during the rest of the period.

The Jays refused to punt on fourth down twice but stopped Clintonville anyway. Baldauf made one 12-yard run before the attack bogged. Ambrose Naleway intercepted a pass to give the Jays the ball once more and Block tossed a pass to James Wiegand for a first down on the 35. Passes failed and Clintonville took the ball. On third down Breed attempted a punt which was blocked by Wippich. The Truckers recovered on their 27 and punted out.

Grant intercepted a pass tossed by the Menasha third string and returned to the Bluejay 32 and the regulars went in. Robinson intercepted a pass and the Jays rolled beyond midfield. O'Brien tossed to Nantke for a 19-yard gain but Clintonville braced.

Using reverses with Kautz, a speedy halfback, carrying the ball the Truckers made it first on the Bluejay 38. Breed tossed to Korb for a first on the 26 but the Jays held for four downs. Nantke made 10 and O'Brien tossed to Wideman for 30 yards gain but three passes failed and Wiegand punted into the end zone from the 50. Using spread formations with Smith tossing long passes or running, Clintonville gained three first downs and 35 yards as the game ended.

BLUE EAGLES STARS — Appleton Blue Eagles will clash with the Manitowoc Galloping Gaels tomorrow afternoon at the Spencer street field in an Eastern Marine league game with the two players above expected to do things. At the top is Sonny Filz, former high school back, who passes, runs and kicks with the best in the circuit. Just above is Mark Catlin, Jr., former Wisconsin end, who will hold down a wing position for the Eagles and who probably will be Filtz' target on a lot of passes. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

Blue Eagles Primed For Manitowoc Gaels

Appleton Team to Show at Spencer Field on Sunday

With their cripples well again and bolstered by new talent, the Appleton Blue Eagles will oppose the Manitowoc Galloping Gaels at the Spencer street field Sunday afternoon. It will be an Eastern Marine league game.

Mark Catlin, Jr., former University of Wisconsin gridder, has joined the squad and will be at end. He made his debut last week and played outstanding ball hauling down passes and breaking up plays. He will team with Sonny Filz, elusive back and a left handed passer on forwards and they should be a consistent threat. Filz also is a handy open field runner.

The Eagles will present a line which averages a trifle over 200 pounds. Russ Becker will be at center with Captain Don Green at one guard and Herbert Eggert, 225 pounds at the other. Henry Horn will show at one tackle and Schrander at the other. Catlin will have one end position and Harvey Koerwitz the other.

Fast Backfield

The backfield is fast and every man is a pass receiver. Filz will call the plays, do a lot of running and much of the passing Ray Brasch will be at fullback and will attempt to duplicate his two touchdowns of last week. Bud Werner and Sam Fredericks, a couple of the south side's own gridders, will hold down the halfback berths. Werner has shown ability as a blocker while Fredericks can run or pass.

Others who will see action are J. Larson and J. Brandt, ends, R. Tracy, Charles Deeg and Marion Jansen, guards, Spencer, center, D Sprangers and T. Brasch, tackles, and Clarence Deeg, C. Reider and E. Laux, backs.

Manitowoc has lost two and tied one in league competition. The tie was an 0-0 affair with Sheboygan which nosed out Appleton, 19-18, last week.

The Gaels are coached by Rex John, son of the former high school coach and a former Wisconsin gridder. They carry 26 men and have a squad which averages 180 pounds in the line and 170 pounds in the backfield.

Their squad shows: Centers, Windy Miller of St. Norbert and Stuart Wetenkamp; guards, Ken French, Ralph Bertler, Carroll Geraldson of St. Olaf college, Sam Dwoskin, Berlin Bolle, and Clayton Frich of Milwaukee Teachers; tackles, Curley Pask, Marv Korlesky, Moose Beduhn, Rex John, formerly of Wisconsin, and Art Mrotek; ends, Max Mrotek, Dave Novak, John Weyer, Everette Bolle, and John Sauer of Platevillte; backfield, Pat McDonnell, Idaho State, Cy Miller, Alex Pauze, Harold Anderson of Navy, Ken Schmitt, Dick John of the University of Wisconsin; Joe Tadych and Russ Glason.

Appleton B's Nip Kimberly

Lueck Scores Both Touchdowns in 12-6 Win on Long Runs

Appleton High school's football fortunes seem to be looking up for yesterday afternoon the Bee squad downed the Kimberly High school varsity by a 12 to 6 score in a curtailed game. It was the third straight win for Appleton's future greats.

After playing see-saw ball, Appleton counted in the third frame on a sleeper from Kimball to Lueck, the latter running 60 yards for the marker. Kimberly drove back to tie the score. On the kickoff, Kimball caught the ball and ran straight across the field, handing the ball to Lueck. Lueck reversed the field and streaked 80 yards for the winning margin: Kimberly threatened a few times after that but Appleton stiffened to snub the Papermakers.

Real Portsiders

Brooklyn — There are only two left-handed and left-footed players in the National Football League. The portsiders are Sam Francis, Brooklyn Dodger back, and George Mc Afee, rookie Chicago Bear back. Francis was an All American at Nebraska and Mc Afee starred for three years as an undergraduate at Duke University.

Western Alaska to See First Grid Game—in Snow

Anchorage, Alaska—(AP)— Western Alaska will see its first football game tomorrow, a clash between the army unit and the new airbase construction crew played on a "turf" of hard-packed snow.

A roller was used to pack down yesterday's eight-inch snowfall.

The rosters include several former college players, among them Bill Moore from the University of Tennessee; Lee Drake, Washington State college; Bob Ullzrick, University of Texas, and Bob Risley, University of California.

Marquette in 41 to 25 Win

Hilltoppers Lead 41-6 In 3rd Period

BY ARTHUR BYSTROM

Milwaukee—(AP)—Marquette's football team, whipped a week ago by Wisconsin, came back with a vengeance last night to smother Iowa State, 41 to 25 in a thrill-packed football game.

A crowd of 17,000, one of the largest in recent years, saw the Golden Avalanche run up a 41 to 6 lead in the first three quarters and then coast in while the Cyclones added three touchdowns in the final period, mostly against Marquette reserves.

Marquette's regular had little trouble with the Iowans, smashing their line and tossing passes over them to gain a commanding advantage.

They marched 83 yards for their first score, 68 for their second and 63 for the third. When Ray Apolskis intercepted a pass and ran 55 yards for the fourth touchdown it looked like a complete rout of the Cyclones.

The Iowans never gave up, however, fighting back all the way, despite the fact they were completely outclassed through the first half.

Jimmy Richardson and Johnny Goodyear sparked most of the Marquette drives through the first half. In the closing periods little Harvey Baerwald, 155 pounds of speed and class, turned in a great performance for Marquette, passing and running to set up scores.

March 83 Yards

Richardson scored the first Marquette touchdown, going over from the one-yard line after the 83 yard march. Goodyear converted. Two passes from Richardson to Goodyear featured the second march and Doug Renzel carried it over from the two. Goodyear converted again. The third score came on a 20-yard pass from Richardson to Bob Sleske but the kick was wide. A few moments later Apolskis intercepted Bob Seaburg's pass and raced 55 yards to score and Bob Kemnitz converted.

A minute before the first half a 12-yard pass from Seaburg to Robert Lechtenberg gave Iowa State its first score. The kick failed.

Baerwald unleashed a 45 yard pass to Bob Sleske to set up Marquette's next score early in the third period. Baerwald then crashed over right tackle, reversed his field and raced 11 yards to score. Kemnitz's kick was good. The next touchdown was the culmination of an 85 yard Marquette march with Baerwald passing to Sleske for the score and Kemnitz adding the final extra point with a placement.

A series of passes gave the Cyclones position in the final period and Larry Owens went over from the two yard line. The kick failed. Paul Darling then ran 27 yards for another touchdown and his kick was good for the extra point. Robert Lechtenberg added the final Iowa State score with a line plunge.

Marquette made 14 first downs to 10 for Iowa State. The Golden Avalanche completed 7 of 11 passes for 174 yards while the Cyclones completed 9 of 17 for 182 yards. Marquette gained 149 yards from scrimmage and Iowa State 92.

Lotshaw Joins Bears

Chicago — Andy Lotshaw, famous trainer of the Chicago Cubs, has rejoined the Chicago Bears National Football League team. Trainer Lotshaw has been employed by the Bears longer than he has by the Cubs. Andy joined the Bears, then the Decatur, Ill., Staleys, in 1920 and he became the trainer of the Cubs in 1922.

ST. JOHN'S LEADERS CONFER—St. John high gridders will open a 4-week home stand tomorrow when they meet Menasha St. Mary's in the 'big' game of the season. The Zephyrs need a win to assure them of the Valley Catholic title and, of course, if the Dutchmen can produce an upset, they'll have a strangle hold on honors despite the fact it is their first league game. The picture shows, left to right, Coach Marty DeeBruin, Cletus Hurst, named captain for the game, and Al Boots, assistant coach. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

Catholic Grid Title at Stake in St. Mary's-St. John Tilt Sunday

Little Chute — St. John High school gridders will oppose Menasha St. Mary's High school team at the Dutchmen park Sunday afternoon in a Catholic conference game. It will open the St. John home schedule of four straight games.

On the following Sunday Chilton high will invade the local park. On Oct. 27, Lourdes high of Marinette will show here and on Nov. 3 St. Joseph's of Keshena will oppose the locals. The Dutchmen will clash with St. Norbert at De Pere on Nov. 9, in the final contest of the season.

Sunday's battle will be the toughest of the schedule, according to the way St. Mary's has been conquering all opposition. Comparing records of the two schools St. John holds six wins over St. Mary's while the latter has won seven contests from the locals.

St. John has played Edgewood high of Madison, Kimberly and Kiel. The Dutchmen dropped two and won one.

St. Mary's defeated by St. Benedicts of Milwaukee 12 to 7, for its only loss. The Zephyrs hold wins over New London, St. Joseph's of Keshena and St. Norbert of De Pere.

St. John has been jinxed by injuries for the last month losing Butch Van Grinsven, regular center, probably for the rest of the season. He has a dislocated shoulder. Kenny Hurst has a broken nose but he has been in the lineup. Jim Koehn was out of action against Kiel due to a torn ligament in his leg and Cletus Hurst has a sprained wrist. Only Van Grinsven is definitely out of the game for Sunday.

The kickoff is set for 2:15.

Zephyrs Travel To Little Chute In Title Quest

Victory Sunday Will Give St. Mary's 4th Straight Championship

Menasha —St. Mary's High school gridders will attempt to clinch their fourth straight Fox Valley Catholic conference football championship Sunday when they meet St. John's High school at Little Chute. The game will be the first conference contest for the Dutchmen but will be the last one for the Zephyrs.

The Menasha team already has defeated the other two members of conference, St. Joseph Indian school at Kenosha and St. Norbert High school of DePere, and a victory Sunday will give them the title. Should Little Chute win, the Dutchmen will have to get by St. Norbert and the Keshena school to claim the title.

The Chuters have a veteran team with the exception of the ends who were lost by graduation last year. However, that team received a 38 to 0 drubbing from the Zephyrs and the Little Chute team will be out for revenge Sunday.

Probable starters for the Zephyrs will be Farnham Johnson and Norbert Bayer at ends, Wilbur Foth and Virgil Lingnofski at tackles, Sylvester Burghardt and Bob Burling at guards, and William Bayer at center. Bayer is one of the lightest men on the squad, weighing about 130 pounds. However, he has forced Norbert Giesen, 250 pounds, to switch from center to a tackle position.

The backfield probably will start with Don Hoks at quarterback and brother Emmet at fullback, Al Taves at right half and Len Schipferling at left half. Jerome Laux and Vern Coopman probably will work in at the halfback posts also.

Packers Hope to Break Tie in Pro Grid Loop

Meets Cleveland Rams; Latter Has Dropped 2 Games

Green Bay—Tied with the Chicago Bears and Detroit for first place in the Western division of the National Football league, the Green Bay Packers take on a formidable opponent in the Cleveland Rams here Sunday afternoon.

With the great Parker Hall in the backfield, Coach Dutch Clark's organization is a continual threat. The Packers, defending a league championship again, have been warned by Coach Curly Lambeau that the Rams are sure to be most troublesome.

Backs to Wall

Lambeau recalls too well the stinging defeat the Packers suffered from the Rams last year, in the first of two games between the two teams. The Rams have been beaten by Detroit and the Bears this season, and will be fighting with their backs to the wall. Green Bay lost one game, to the powerful Bear aggregation.

Hall is one of the ace passers in the circuit, and is particularly dangerous when Jim Benton is on the receiving end. There likely will be considerable aerial work in this game with Cecil Isbell, Arnold Herber, Don Hutson and others figuring in the Packers' attack.

Kickoff at 2 P. M.

Interest in the Packers-Rams series is growing each year, and a large crowd can be expected at City stadium for the 2 o'clock kickoff. Many choice seats remain, however, and late comers can be assured of good reservations.

Packer drills this week included work on their overhead game. Due to the threat provided by Hall and Benton, attention was also given to brushing up on pass defense.

Green Bay's National Guardsmen will attend the game as guests of the Packer managers.

Members of Headquarters battery, 126th field artillery, and B battery, 121st field artillery, who leave for a year's activity duty in Louisiana next week will be introduced to the crowd between halves while the Packers' Lumberjack band toots its tribute with patriotic airs.

Milwaukee Pro Chiefs Have Tough Assignment

Milwaukee —(AP)— The Milwaukee Chiefs, who have had only two points scored against them all year, draw a tough assignment here tomorrow when they meet the Cincinnati Bengals in an American Professional league game.

The Bengals boast one of the strongest running attacks in the league and are expected to provide a stiff test for the Chief's line, which has been one of the biggest factors in their six straight victories.

Coach Ivan (Tiny) Cahoon of the Chiefs reported that his squad has shown more drive and spirit than ever since the American Legion took over the Milwaukee franchise.

Beloit Passes Defeat Cornell College, 14-0

Beloit —(AP)— Beloit college remained in the thick of the Midwest conference football fight by defeating Cornell college 14 to 0 last night.

Eddie May, Beloit halfback, plunged for the first touchdown in the second stanza after two long passes had moved the ball 68 yards to the 3-yard stripe.

In the third quarter, Captain Jack Griffith sprinted 57 yards through tackle for another touchdown.

Both extra points were missed.

Beloit's final two points came late in the game when Rodine was smothered in the end zone as he attempted to pass.

Seek Ways to Help 'Little Business'

Washington—(AP)—A special senate committee Friday sought some way of diverting part of the billions of dollars for national defense to "little business."

Senator Murray (D-Mont.), chairman of the group granted senate authority this week to investigate the problems of small business said the spread of defense spending was one of "several immediate problems we hope to solve."

"It's only natural that when a defense commission is composed of big industrialists that they want to operate through the large corporations and people they know," Murray said. "At the same time, the little fellow should have a part in this program and there should be a way to do that."

Murray said the committee probably would hold no public hearings in order to "concentrate on a research instead of an investigation."

"We have all the facts we need from countless other hearings and investigations," he said. "What we hope to do is find some way to really help little business, possibly through some kind of legislative measure."

Other senators on the committee are Mead (D-N. Y.), Maloney (D-Conn.), Ellender (D-La.), Taft (R-Ohio) and Capper (R-Kas.).

Otto F. Christenson Endorses Roosevelt

Stevens Point—(AP)—Otto F. Christenson, Progressive candidate for attorney general, endorsed President Roosevelt for a third term in a radio address here yesterday.

"I want to pay tribute to that truly American stand of President Roosevelt in the affairs of the world," Christenson said. "He nailed the banner of America out in front of all nations to profess again and to emphasize the fundamental philosophy not only of the founding fathers of this country, but of the great teacher, Christ the Master."

Man Electrocuted

Stoughton, Wis. —(AP)— Carl Lytajohan, an employe of the local municipal electric utility, was electrocuted yesterday while working on a power line near here.

The DOG OWNER and HIS DOG

BY ALLAN KERR

Few will argue the contention that some dogs are born dumb. But all dogs that act dumb are not necessarily nit-wits. The pup that "we just simply can't do a thing with" will show a wealth of intelligence in different, and proper, hands; and careful handling and guidance may make this so called dumb dog a positive stand-out.

Continued breeding of purebred dogs for obedience test work at American Kennel club shows is producing a new strain of superior intelligence. To be exact, it is fostering brain power in practically all of the 109 recognized breeds, since there are few breeds, today which do not compete successfully in obedience trials held in all parts of the United States.

The training of dogs for obedience trials does not increase the intelligence of the specimens, but it does locate those good individuals of the greatest aptitude. In actual practice it has been discovered that practically all of the bench show specimens selected for training have proved themselves capable of performing with great credit. This is attested by the large number of bench show champions that also hold obedience test degrees.

Helps in Mating

The greatest value of obedience test work is the data which it furnishes to breeders. In the past, when they rated the intelligence of the male and female specimens they planned to mate they were forced to make their own estimates. Today, this has been reduced to actual figures that give a specific rating. If the serious dog breeders use obedience test results as carefully as they do other factors in the production of quality stock, it will mean a gradual improvement of canine intelligence.

There is little likelihood that dog breeders of today will forget the intelligence factor, for obedience trials have become among the most popular features at bench shows. As a result, within a few years time, nearly half the all-breed shows in America now make provision for these classes to be judged.

This is in line with what this column has been harping on for several years. To our way of looking at the situation, there is no good reason why a dog cannot be both handsome and smart; and from all indications, we have every reason to believe that an increasing number of them are going to be just that.

But it must be remembered that without a complete record of the show, field trial, and obedience test results, and a reliable recording of the breeding activities throughout the nation, no great amount of success would be possible. Fortunately, we have this necessary information on file in the dog game's large, old, efficient registering bodies, the American Field and the American Kennel club.

Need there be any better reason for demanding, "Where are the papers."

Lunch Box Is Important Factor in Child's Health

Madison—"Good teeth, straight bones, firm muscles, red blood, well-developed brains and bodies cannot be made unless there is the right choice as well as the right amount of food in your children's lunch box," the state medical society advised today.

"Every child should have at least one hot dish in his lunch, and when lunches must be carried to school, it is wise to purchase some kind of a vacuum bottle or container in which warm food can be carried. Cocoa, cream soup, vegetable stew, macaroni and cheese, stewed vegetables, or other similar easily prepared, nourishing dish should be included. The dinner at night can contain foods which cannot be included in the lunch box; however, the noon lunch should include besides the hot dish, milk; protein food, such as cheese, cottage cheese, egg or meat; fruit or vegetables; a sweet such as a cooky, jam to eat with bread and butter, or a piece or two of candy.

"Careful studies have shown that the afternoon work in school shows a marked improvement and that there is a better school spirit and a more wholesome social atmosphere when a hot dish has been included in the noon lunch of the school child.

Attracitve Wrappings

"Mother in preparing the lunch should use the same tactics that food manufacturers use in packing their products. Attractive packages and colored wrappings invite the purchaser to buy a particular product. The manufacturers have found that an attractive package is a good salesman—so the mother might use the same appeal in selling her child a good, well-balanced lunch.

"Use a bright-colored cloth napkin, wrap the food in colored cellophane or colored transparent waxed paper, and wrap each piece of the lunch separately. A little extra care to increase the attractiveness of the school child's lunch, to make it gayer, will pay large dividends in the increased appetites.

"Cleanliness in the handling of foods is of great importance to every human being, but it is especially important for children because they have less resistance to the germs which cause so many of the communicable diseases. Milk, fresh fruits, and uncooked vegetables, which we know are indispensable in the diet of growing children, may be so carelessly handled as to be the means of spreading disease. Fruits and vegetables should be washed thoroughly before they are put into the lunch box.

"It will repay you to give much thought and careful planning to your child's food—both at home and at school. Serious food problems should, of course, be discussed with the family physician."

Fox Valley Low in Number Of Public Assistance Cases

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)

Madison — In nearly every instance, the lowest public assistance case loads in Wisconsin are found in the good agricultural counties and in the Fox river valley, the state welfare department reported today.

Analyzing the percentage of population receiving public assistance on the basis of the 1940 census returns for the first time, the department's analysts found that the average in the state is 11.8 per cent, while the median county has a public assistance burden representing 10.6 per cent of its total population.

The analysts included general relief work projects administration, national youth administration, social security aids, civil conservation corps, farm subsistence grants and surplus commodities, and was based upon mid-summer loads.

3 Under 5 Per Cent

There were only three counties under 5 per cent, Kewaunee, Calumet and Ozaukee. Heaviest proportion of public assistance cases was found in Florence county, at the northeastern tip of the state, where 40 per cent, or two out of every five residents, received some form of public aid.

"One of the factors that intensify the fiscal problem of public assistance is that the counties having the largest relief burdens are in the poorest economic circumstances," the report noted.

Thus the 11 counties with loads of 20 per cent and over are all in the much-discussed northern cutover region, although the heavily populated counties of Milwaukee, Racine and Kenosha also fall in the upper half of the case load distribution.

The proportion of public assistance cases to the general population in the northeastern Wisconsin counties was given as follows:

Brown 9.2 per cent, Outagamie 6.8, Winnebago 9.7, Manitowoc 7.4, Calumet 3.8, Waupaca 10, Shawano 11.1.

Murray Warns Every Person Will Have to Help Pay U. S. Debt

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

Washington — Congressman Reid F. Murray, Waupaca Republican, warns that every living human being is going to contribute toward paying the public debt whether it is the rich, the poor or the average individual.

"If the New Deal has increased the public debt $27,000,000,000," he told his colleagues in the house, "the farm people will surely have to repay over $6,000,000,000 with interest as they represent about 25 per cent of the people."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace may believe and may try to make this country believe that because a farmer doesn't pay any income tax, he isn't paying any taxes toward the national debt, but he surely went to a different school than most of us in order to come to this kind of a conclusion," Murray declared.

"The New Deal has placed invisible mortgages of $1,000 on every farm in America and other property in proportion," he asserted.

Air Discrimination Against 65 German Lutheran Parishes

Omaha, Neb. —(AP)— Discriminations against the 65 German Lutheran congregations in Canada since the outbreak of the European war were recounted Friday at the 12th biennial convention of the United Lutheran church.

The church's board of American missions declared that although most of the congregation members in Ontario are native Canadians, and in the west are from such non-German countries as Russia and Poland, "the public mind does not make easy distinctions."

"In Ontario German preaching has been completely banished. In some places under the threat of demolition of church property," the board asserted. "In Windsor the use of all languages is forbidden except English, French and Latin. In the west German preaching has not been interfered with.

An inimical attitude shows itself particularly where congregations are under financial obligation to secular institutions. In two cases mortgages were threatened with foreclosures. In a third case only the lack of a legal technically prevented a similar procedure."

In many cases, the board said, congregations have suffered because their members lost employment.

Drowns in Creek

Madison —(AP)— Michael M. Harrington, 75, of Whitewater, was drowned in Starkweather creek, near here, last night. Harrington, who had been visiting his son, Albert, was walking along a path which follows the creek when he apparently lost his way in the darkness.

Local Groups

Milwaukee —(AP)— The Wisconsin Council of National Defense yesterday authorized the formation of local defense committees in at least 28 state cities to aid the national defense program.

The local groups will consist of the mayor or city manager, a representative of the chamber of commerce, and the central labor council, and two others to be named by the first three.

Frank Bane, Washington, D. C., executive director of the advisory committee to the council of national defense told the group, recently appointed by Governor Heil, that it was the job of state defense councils to marshal the nation's resources.

"The national council sees no problem as far as agriculture is concerned," Bane declared. "But many headaches probably will come from the need to provide new housing, educational facilities and safe and healthful recreation wherever industrial development or armed service cantonments mass new groups."

The council announced that 160 vacant industrial plants were available for defense manufacturing in Wisconsin, most of them in "good" or "fair" condition.

One of the first projects of the defense council, it was announced, will be the fostering of preliminary arrangements to construct a chain of new airports throughout the state.

Yesterday's meeting was presided over by Ralph S. Kingsley, Kenosha, president of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce, who was designated chairman by the governor.

Martin W. Torkelson, executive secretary of the state planning board, was appointed secretary, and Mayor James R. Law, Madison, vice chairman.

Meetings will be held in Torkelson's office at Madison the second Monday of each month.

French Monument to Negroes Destroyed On Orders From Nazis

Berlin — (AP)—France's monument of gratitude to her Negro soldiers for services in the World war has been blasted on German orders, authorized sources disclosed today.

The "Monument Aux Noirs" on Avenue de Chalons at Reims, was regarded by the Germans as an insult to the white race, it was said. The monument was a bronze group of Negro soldiers gathered about the French tricolor.

The inscription read: "Aus heros de la-armee noire"—to the heroes of the black army.

In the cornerstone was a document dated Oct. 29, 1922, in which public thanks was given the black soldiers for helping "liberal, motherly France" in her struggle, and among the signers was General Andre Maginot, builder of the Maginot line.

The Reims city administration undertook the job of blowing up the monument, said German sources, "not entirely on its own initiative. It needed persuasian by the German military commander."

"The fact that the nation did not hesitate to perpetuate the memory of this disgrace of European culture by a monument shows more than anything else how deep it sank," said an authorized source.

Stone Memorial Is Sure to Endure Throughout the Years

It has been said that nothing which man builds during life is definitely lasting and that statement is very nearly true, points out the Twin City Monument Works. Estates, possessions, securities, inheritances-these are splendid things but not one is certain to endure.

It is, perhaps, for just that reason, according to the Twin City Monument Works, Neenah, that the "build while you live" idea has been widely applied to monuments. The family monument is the one thing that is not likely to be lost or destroyed. Once it has become the legal property of the family, it remains so through the generations. That memorial, of all things, is an estate that is solid, secure, and enduring.

When a beautiful memorial of stone is erected, a tribute which will always remain beautiful has been placed. The beauty which is given to the monument, the carving and enrichment which go into it, the message that is cut upon its surface—these will withstand the wear of weather and time and will endure without change through the years.

The Twin City Monument Works memorials are known for their exceptional beauty and design, the high quality of the materials used, and their reflection of the splendid craftsmanship shown by its builders.

The designs and plans offered by this firm are the products of the nation's outstanding memorial artists and designers. The materials of which the memorials are constructed come from the world's most famous quarries and are of certified durability and quality. Headquarters of the Twin City Monument Works are located at 301-307 Main street, Neenah, and consultations regarding any type of memorial need are invited without obligation.

Berliner Beer Noted for Its Extra Sparkle

Product Distributed Locally to Taverns, Homes by Sam Mader

Any time is beer time if it is Berliner beer, say the many enthusiastic people who enjoy this popular brew daily. Folks who regularly enjoy Berliner customarily refer to it as the beer with that extra sparkle, tang, and zest which gives needed pep, vigor, and energy.

Other admirers of Berliner say that every glass of beer can be raised with a joyous "Here's Health," because Berliner has had health brewed into it from the start.

Then, too, Berliner boasts something new in fine flavor. Its taste reveals fine brewing by expert brewmasters and it is this taste which accounts in no small measure for the popularity it enjoys among beer lovers.

Choicest hops and yeasts are used in its making together with pure Artesian well water. This, combined with the deliberating care exercised in producing Berliner, explains the reason for its luxuriously full-bodied, rich, supreme, and gently stimulating character.

Berliner may be had at most popular beer gardens restaurants and recreational clubs by calling for it by name. Home delivery service is available by 'phoning Sam Mader, 3029, local distributor.

Reservoir Company Drops Financing Plea

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison — The Wolf River Reservoir company, which proposes to build a Wolf river dam in order to improve the water power of the lower Fox River Valley for industrial uses, has withdrawn its application to issue securities to finance its project, public service commission records show.

At a hearing held here this week, sponsors of the company withdrew the application without explanation.

They submitted for state approval, however, engineering plans for the construction of the dam in the river's upper reaches in Langlade county. According to Adolph Kanneberg, of the commission's water power staff, the application should be reviewed within a few days.

Low Original Cost Feature Of Coolerator

Lutz Offers Free Ice Until March 1st to Purchasers

The average family budget demands that low cost be an essential point to consider when purchasing a refrigerator is the experience of Lutz Ice Company, distributors of Coolerator, the famous air-conditioned coolerator.

It is possible to figure for days, the Lutz firm maintains, and not discover a refrigerator that will give half what Coolerator does—and yet Coolerator costs only half the price families ordinarily would expect to pay.

Because Coolerator uses ice in a totally new air-conditioned way and because of its heavy insulation, it is only necessary to re-ice once every four to seven days. The operating costs, therefore, are about the same or less in some cases than mechanical refrigerators of equal capacity. Then, too, Coolerator eliminates the inconvenience of covered dishes and any intermingling of food odors.

Most people want a good looking refrigerator and in this department Coolerator likewise excells. Finished in snowy white, beautiful deluxe finish, it keeps its handsome gardenia-like finish spotless for years. Just a few wipes of a damp cloth are enough to keep it brilliant and shining at all times. The hinges and door handles are heavily chromium plated which means that they keep shiny and free from tarnish and stain. Purchasers of a new Coolerator during the next few months will be particularly fortunate because the Lutz firm is offering free ice service from the time of purchase up to March 1, 1941. In other words, about five months of free ice service may be had by immediate purchase of a Coolerator. In addition, its popular 10-day free trial offer continues in affect. Any prospective customer may try out the Coolerator in his own home, compare it with any other refrigerator on the market, and if not satisfied with the performance, the Lutz firm will gladly accept its return without the slightest obligation on the part of the customer.

In addition to being distributors of Coolerators, the Lutz company maintains complete fuel service, supplying coal and coke of most popular brands. A bin filled now with quality coal delivered by Lutz' courteous drivers will be a real source of satisfaction when cold weather arrives to stay, the Lutz company reminds.

EAGLE INSULATION BRINGS FUEL SAVINGS—While it is generally known that Eagle Insulation brings fuel savings up to 40% wherever complete installations are made, the Kolitsch family, whose home at 517 S. Locust street, is shown here, reports fuel savings amounting to 46% during the last two years since the installation of Eagle Insulation in the walls and ceilings in May, 1938. Even temperatures both upstairs and downstairs are also reported with at least 15 degrees cooler temperature being enjoyed during the warm summer months as a result of the excellent insulation protection produced by the product.

46 Pct. Fuel Savings Shown by An Eagle Insulated Home

It's one thing to talk about the heating efficiencies brought about through use of Eagle Insulation in a home, points out the Eagle Insulation Company, 516 N. Oneida street, but it is usually quite another matter to present actual facts regarding these results.

In the case of the Kolitsch home 15 tons of coal were necessary to properly heat all of the rooms previous to the installation of Eagle Insulation. Now eight tons will do the job nicely, representing a considerable saving in this expensive household item. In addition, many other advantages are being enjoyed. Eagle Insulation's thick, efficient barrier to heat keeps the warmth resulting from the Kolitsch automatic stoker heating plant inside the house where it can do its best work by keeping the home cozy and comfortably warm.

Elimination of drafts, caused by temperature differences, is also experienced with no more chilly ankles or shoulders or shivery drafts coming down the stairs. Throughout the house temperatures remain comparatively constant with rapid rises or sudden drops exceedingly rare. Danger of cold and resultant more serious illnesses have been minimized. Every room upstairs and down is being comfortably heated and there is no need to shut off heat from some rooms to keep other rooms warm.

Because this superior insulating material holds the heat of the furnace inside the house for a longer time furnace-forcing has become a thing of the past.

15 Degrees Cooler

Inside temperatures are easily kept as much as 15 degrees lower than outside in the summer time merely by closing windows during the heat of the day and opening them at night. The bedrooms, too, are more comfortable with upstairs temperatures during warm days practically as pleasant as downstairs with rarely more than 1 or 2 degrees difference.

Dozens of other local homeowners and business places likewise report large fuel savings since Eagle Insulation was installed. Reports on record show sensational fuel savings enjoyed by these users. These are on file at the Eagle Insulation office and will gladly be shown on request. Sold on easy payment terms with no payments necessary until two months after purchase, it is easy to buy Eagle Insulation and with the added fuel saving the cost of insulation is soon returned to the owners, the firm points out. Estimates are given without obligation and all that is necessary for this service is to 'phone 2600.

Wallpaper Is Smart Way to Dress Up Home

Frank E. Schultz Shows Line of New Patterns

Wallpaper is both a smart and economical way to redecorate most any home is the opinion of Frank E. Schultz, 1003 N. Richmond street. Mr. Schultz has a wide experience in all types of interior and exterior decorating and wallpaper hanging having practiced his trade for over thirty-six years.

A complete selection of wallpapers in all the newest patterns, including the popular washable variety are available through him. He will be glad to display his patterns by appointment at his own home or take them direct to the homeowner. Mr. Schultz calls attention to the fact that he is able to supply most every desired style or wallpaper pattern at unusually low prices making it possible to do over the walls of an entire home at the cost of perhaps several rooms at regular prices.

Interior decorating jobs are ably handled by Mr. Schultz for he has a complete knowledge of correct color schemes and knows how to adapt them to individual homes. His work in this department is definitely superior, points out these who have viewed samples of his work.

There are many things which can be done in the interior decorating line which will produce a more livable and pleasant home, Mr. Schultz observes. Starting with the first floor, the kitchen, living room, bath, dining room and guest room can all benefit from well-planned decorating. Second floor bedrooms can be made to look brighter and more cheerful with an amplication of a good, full bodied, brilliant, fadeproof paint or by use of well chosen wallpapers.

There is still time to place an order for exterior painting of the home. Most homes need a new coat of paint quite regularly for protection against destructive winter weather, to avoid excessive depreciation, and to keep up its general appearance. Long experience in house painting makes it possible for him to mix his house paints to the proper consistency and apply them in the manner which will assume longest life and freedom from chipping, cracking or peeling before it has given a full amount of service.

Don't wait until the neighbors complain before painting is decided upon. They generally don't say anything Mr. Schultz states, but they resent perhaps the one shabby looking house that spoils the appearance of the entire block. If your home is thought of properly as an investment, all the more reason exists why it should be painted regularly and avoid excessive depreciation.

Therefore, whether its wallpaper, wallpaper hanging, interior or exterior painting and decorating home owners will be wise to consult Mr. Schultz for both economy and quality reasons. A call to 463 is all that is necessary to arrange for an appointment.

Memory of the Moon

"Heaven preserve us," broke in Meg, "and me thinkin' a foine lady you were, with niver a thought for the toil of money and its worth. Well, well, a workin' girl you are. Now what is it you want to know, pet?"

"Meg, I have to know who let the Taylors know I was coming, so I'll know who is trying to double-cross me at home."

"Well now pet, you can't learn. It come in one of those there animositous telegrams. I'll get it, but mind you, niver a word of my showing you?"

Solemnly Constance went through the ritual of secrecy, then hugged Meg's arm, unaware she was cementing a stout friendship for years to come.

Meg sailed out and back with a comical air of nonchalance, then drew a telegram out from under her apron and stood back while Constance read it.

The wire, Constance thought, was all that Meg had called it in her coined word — animositous. It was not only anonymous, but written in animosity. Her face paled and the blue of her eyes turned dark as she read.

CONCHITA CABRILLO ENROUTE TO RANCHO INCOGNITO LOOK OUT FOR HER SHE'S AS SHREWD AS OLD MICKEY MAHONEY FREEZE HER OUT AND WE'LL SWING THE DEAL FOR YOU WHILE SHE'S ON THE REBOUND A FRIEND

Constance handed the telegram back to Meg without a word.

"Y'know who sent it, and it hurts, pet."

"It ... it does hurt, Meg," she agreed.

Don had written that wire. Don was paying her off for refusing to save his car.
